Ottawa Changing Welfare?

Baby Bonus Maybe —Aged Pension No

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA (Special)—Twice Monday, Health Minister John Munro was given the chance to dispel growing uncertainties about the future of family allowances. Twice, he declined.

Instead, he seemed to firm up a little more the possibility that the baby bonus, along with other welfare, will be based increasingly on actual need. He did, however, issue what amounted to a denial of a similar cutback in the old age pension.

Munro said the government wants to make its social welfare programs "more selective" to provide more for "the startling number of Canadians living below the poverty level."

He said it was his personal opinion that, "in certain of the high income groups, the universality of the baby bonus, the payment of family allowances, is questionable."

Munro

Munro made his remarks in reply to a direct question as to whether in this affluent age, the baby bonus was losing its high priority in the federal welfare program.

He disclosed the report of a task force, which deputy welfare minister J. W. Willard headed in a year-long study of the government's social security programs now was in front of the cabinet.

DIRECT QUESTION

When the Commons opened, NDP whip Stanley Knowles of Winnipeg put the direct question to Munro: "Does the government have any intention of introducing legislation to eliminate or cut back either family allowances or old age pensions?"

Here was the first opportunity to deny it, but Munro left the question hanging.

'NO DECISION'

"There is no government decision, one way or another," he replied, which could only mean the government was considering the future of the baby bonus.

This he confirmed minutes later, outside the Commons.

'UNDER REVIEW'

It was different, he conceded, in its contributory aspects as the "substructure" to the Canada Pension Plan.

But the baby bonus, he explained, had been "under review for a year" by the Willard task force, and was only one of a number of welfare programs being looked at, some "with a view to making some changes."

If the family allowances program was one of those where "some changes" might be made, Munro was asked, then was it possible the switch in it would be from the basis of payment to all families to only those actually in need?

'PREMATURE'

It would be "premature," he replied, to say what tests, need or any other measuring stick, might be applied.

The government, recalled the welfare minister, was "studying all social security programs" with the objective of "introducing more of the element of selectivity."

The future of the baby bonus came into question late last week when Prime Minister Trudeau forecast massive cutbacks in federal spending.

Asked directly if the family allowance program might be a candidate for the economy knife, the prime minister said only, "that would be telling" — then went on to remark that the $562,500,000 the program costs annually was "a very large chunk of money."

TRIAL BALLOON

Calgary North Conservative MP Eldon Woolliams accused him of flying "a trial balloon," then asked Munro if he didn't think reduction of family allowances might be political suicide?

Who could tell "these days," what constituted political suicide? parried Munro, and anyway there were "other useful pursuits than politics."

Tacoma Gets Curfew Until Races Calm

TACOMA (AP)—City officials clamped a city-wide curfew on Tacoma late Monday in the wake of a racial disturbance in which 35 Negroes were arrested and a dozen persons injured.

Police Chief Charles Zittell said the crew, from 9 p.m. to 5 a.m., will continue daily "until things calm down."

It covers a two-square-mile area, scene of rock-throwing and scattered looting overnight Sunday. Policeman Herman Knaack, 35, was in critical condition after he was hit in the side with a bullet during the disturbance. (See also Page 34.)

Overture to Russia?

Peking Seeks Border Talk

PEKING (AFP)—The Chinese government indicated Monday it seeks a peaceful solution to the Sino-Soviet border conflict by proposing discussions on problems of navigation on rivers forming frontiers between the two countries.

One of these rivers, the Ussuri, was the scene of armed clashes which provoked a grave crisis between the two countries in March.

A Chinese note to the Soviet government published by the New China agency said China is willing to send a delegation to Khabarovsk, in Soviet territory, in mid-June to discuss navigation problems.

POSITIVE ATTITUDE

The note said that the Chinese side has always sought to maintain normal navigation on these rivers. It expressed the hope that the "Soviet side will adopt a positive attitude, as it should," and that the necessary measures would be taken "in order to make a success of this meeting."

The Chinese note constituted an acceptance of a Soviet proposal of April 26 that the two

Progress Made On Link

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The talks between Canada and Communist China concerning diplomatic recognition may have made some progress in recent days, a diplomatic source indicated Monday.

The source said there had been a "positive development" in the consultations between Canada's ambassador to Sweden A. J. Andrew and Chinese charge d'affaires Liu Chi-tsai. The Canadian Embassy had no comment on the report, but sources close to the embassy said the consultations were continuing.

Major Speech Wednesday

Nixon: No Troop Cut

From UPI-AP

WAHINGTON — President Nixon conferred for the first time Monday with his military commander in Vietnam and announced he would report to the nation Wednesday night on prospects of ending the war.

The president's meetings with Gen. Creighton Abrams and his decision to go on the air with a "major speech" were made before the Viet Cong initiated a new, intensive wave of mortar attacks in South Vietnam, presidential press secretary Ronald Ziegler said.

Officials said Nixon would not use his speech to announce a limited withdrawal of U.S. troops.

The new Communist attacks were discussed by Abrams and Nixon and drew a strong reaction from Secretary of State William Rogers in a special statement issued in Los Angeles during a fueling stop enroute to Saigon.

Abrams

He said such "indiscriminate and senseless killing and wounding of civilians in their homes and in the streets can only raise questions about the intentions of the other side." His was the first statement from any top Nixon administration official in which the good faith of Hanoi and the Viet Cong in the Paris negotiations was questioned.

SAIGON FIRST

Rogers' 17-day round-the-world trip will first take him to Saigon for four days of talks with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu, U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker and others. The meetings are intended to coordinate allied negotiating strategy at Paris and to analyze the Viet Cong's 10-point peace proposal which was unveiled Thursday in Paris.

Rogers told reporters he hopes to have "constructive meetings at Bangkok of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization and the seven nations with troops in South Vietnam."

"CAUTIOUS OPTIMISM'

He said he also hopes for a constructive session of the Central Treaty Organization meeting in Tehran.

Despite White House disavowal of any plans for a troop withdrawal soon, House Republican leader Gerald Ford told a building trades union conference that both public and private indications warrant "cautious optimism" toward the goal of peace.

"It does appear that we can have cautious optimism," Ford

Woman For President?

PARIS (AP)—A 40-year-old woman lawyer announced Monday she is a candidate for the French presidency, which will be decided in voting June 1 and possibly June 15.

Nelly Bonart-Pontay, mother of a 15-year-old daughter, said she does not expect to win but wants to run so "the nation's women become aware of their own strength." She charged French women are discriminated against socially and professionally.

The Good Life Edited

'Family' Puts Bennett On Cutting-Room Floor

By IAN STREET

Premier Bennett said Monday there have been "some adjustments" made to the government's latest film The Good Life and, under questioning, admitted his role in the 27-minute color production has been cut drastically.

The film, given what the premier called "a trial run" in Kelowna and several other Interior centres last week, met with a storm of criticism from opponents who claimed it was thinly-disguised election propaganda.

* * *

Mr. Bennett stoutly maintained the film, made for the trade, commerce and industrial development department by a North Vancouver producer, was intended to encourage British Columbians to travel throughout their own province.

The critics noted many references in the film to 1952, the year that Social Credit came to power, but directed most of their criticism at seven separate appearances by Mr. Bennett in the film, underlining the message that 17 years of Socred administration has brought prosperity to the province.

Harvard Lampoons Bard

By Any Name Would Smell . . .

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — The Lion in Winter, which earned Katherine Hepburn her third Oscar, Monday received the Harvard Lampoon's award as the worst movie of the year.

The Lampoon, the oldest U.S. college humor magazine, gave its Natalie Wood Award for worst actress to Barbra Streisand for Funny Girl and thanked Miss Wood, Sandy Dennis and Patty Duke for not making any movies last year.

Sidney Poitier was named worst actor for For the Love of Ivy and the Ayn Rand Award for authors went to William Shakespeare for Romeo and Juliet, which the Lampoon found "a cliche-ridden work."

Townful of Dyed Water Instead

Questionable Wine Spirited Away

ASCOLI PICENO, Italy (UPI)—Most of exhibit A in one of Italy's biggest criminal cases is missing — about 2,760,000 gallons of wine. And whoever removed it from four sealed cellars replaced the wine with dyed water.

The disappearance was discovered during a regular weekend check of the cellar. The wine was ordered locked in the cellars last year as the key exhibit in the trial of 270 persons, including internationally-known winemaker Bruno Ferrari.

* * *

The government alleges much of the wine was adulterated with everything from banana skins to ammonia. Some of it, police said, didn't even contain grapes.

Authorities said they did not know when or how the wine was taken. But they estimated it must have needed 300 trips by tanker truck to spirit the stuff away. The amount of water replacing the wine, they said, could supply the nearby town of San Benedetto del Tronto (population 31,274) with water for 24 hours.

Market value of the wine was put at $640,000, but police were more worried about the effect on the trial, which already is considered one of the country's longest, costliest and most complex.

* * *

Ferrari and several relatives and employees of his sizeable wine factories were charged last July with conspiracy, falsehood, commercial fraud and other crimes in the making of wine. Water was changed to wine in an operation taking about eight hours, the government alleged. Ferrari's daily profit at one plant was set at $3,232.

The trial was scheduled to resume May 26 after a recess, but authorities were not sure Monday whether it would reopen on schedule.

ANYTHING GOES: The early 1930s were the heyday of American musical comedy. Nobody cared about the plot. All it took was a string of sharp patter punctuated by great tunes and a batch of production numbers.

Anything Goes is as dated as Desert Song, but it is dated in a happy, nostalgic way. The comedy roles are the best things in the show. Owen Foran is as stuffy as anyone with a name like Sir Evelyn Oakleigh should be, and Ian McIntyre is a crook who can't really go wrong. They both offer standout performances.

Sylvia Hosie sings well and has a happy production number with Bebe Eversfield's line of lovelies. The tap routines are well done and fit the mood of the play. Bill Hosie is tabbed with the romantic lead and he carries it off.

Anything Goes offers Marge Bridgeman the best vehicle for her talents we have seen so far. She has a feel for this type of musical and gets the most out of all her material. Her role as Reno Sweeney, the red hot momma with the heart of gold, needs strong characterization and Marge Bridgeman gives it the works.

The great pity is that Bastion did the show on a limited budget. The set needed better decoration and some of the costumes are not up to scratch.

The show gets off to a rather slow start, but gathers pace rapidly. If the opening numbers had the impact of the second half, this would be a winner all the way.

Musical director Howard Denike has his orchestra under control so the songs come over. Nobody is drowned. There are moments when the diction is not perfect, but any inaudibility is not the fault of the pit.

The two best production numbers are Blow, Gabriel, Blow and Take Me Back to Manhattan. These involve Marge Bridgeman and the dancers and, in Gabriel, the full company. They work well and the audience loved them both.

Anything Goes is full of songs that have become standards. Numbers like You're the Top, I Get a Kick Out of You, Friendship, and the title number are still around.

It would be easy to dismiss Anything Goes as just another revival that might appeal only to an audience steeped in the tradition of musical comedy. The facts point in another direction.

A predominantly young audience brought the cast back for five curtain calls Monday. Anything Goes is still first-class entertainment, and this production is worth seeing.

It will run until Saturday, and for an audience that just wants to be entertained without any message, this is it.

Any show with that number of Hosies has to have something to offer. There are a few faults in this show, mostly in the technical areas, but they are easy to forget with the frosting of Cole Porter's music.

Anything Goes is the best thing Bastion Theatre has offered this season.

Your Good Health

Freckles-Type Moles Should Be Left Alone

By G. T. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 22 and have a fairly good complexion which I feel is marred by three large freckles-type moles on my cheeks.

I discussed removal with our family doctor, but he advised against it since the moles do not detract from my looks and I should learn to live with them.

Well, I am quite self-conscious and would like to do something. Is there any treatment short of surgery — electric needle, bleach, sandpaper, anything? Should I see a dermatologist or could a general practitioner handle this? — S. M.

Not making a mountain of some moles, are you? Bleach won't work; dermabrasion (or "sandpaper") would have to dig so deeply that it would cause a scar; so would the electric needle.

I'd leave them alone. If you don't agree with my advice, then at least go to a plastic surgeon. Any scarring, however slight, would probaby bother you more than the moles do, but then you'd be stuck with the scars.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What would cause a metallic taste in the mouth? I have this almost constantly. — Mrs. M. E. D.

This may result from medications, particularly iron, and iodine or iodides. If you are not taking medicines containing these, remember that both elements sometimes are included in vitamin preparations.

Another possibility is interaction between metallic fillings in teeth; sometimes smoking is a factor; in some cases nervous disorders are involved, and sometimes mild sedation solves the difficulty.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband was x-rayed and found to have gall stones. Somewhere I think I read that milk should not be used by anyone with gall bladder trouble. Am I right? Is there a special diet? — Mrs. J. A. B.

There is no reason why a person with gall bladder trouble should not drink milk in reasonable amounts. Diet is not a matter of great importance, although it is of some significance.

Montreal's Book Closes

MONTREAL (CP)—Increased postal rates have forced the city to abandon publication of its glossy magazine Montreal, city hall spokesmen said.

Civic administrators said postage used to cost about $6,000 a month for the magazine with its circulation of 517,000. Rates rose to $28,000 last November when the last issue was published.

Quick Clearing Seems Sure

Omnibus Bill Saved by Rules

OTTAWA (CP) — Assistance from procedural rulings helped the government defeat late opposition attempts Monday night to water down the much-debated omnibus Criminal Code bill.

But by the time two new amendment proposals had been ruled out of order and MPs on both sides put their arguments on record, Commons work on the legislation remained incomplete after 23 days.

The day's adjournment came before debate on the final reading was finished on a bill that would change the laws governing abortions, gross indecency, lotteries, impaired driving, fire-arms and penal reform among others.

However, the way seemed clear for rapid completion of the third-reading stage when proposed amendments by New Democrat and Creditiste members were argued and tossed out.

Stanely Knowles (NDP-Winnipeg North Centre) moved an amendment which would require

Stanley Knowles (NDP-Winnipeg North Centre) moved an amendment which would require the government to seek Commons approval of any lottery it might seek to institute in future.

The same fate befell a motion by Creditiste leader Real Caouette calling for withdrawal of the bill until after a national referendum on the abortion sections.

The bill would permit lotteries conducted by federal or provincial governments. It would require any provincial lottery to be conducted in accordance with legislation in the province, but a federal lottery could be instituted by government order.

Knowles's amendment provoked debate on its admissibility under third-reading rules, which forbid introduction of amendments on subjects already disposed of at an earlier stage.

Turner moved third reading and reviewed the long and rocky passage of the bill through the parliamentary channels. It still must go to the Senate after it obtains third reading in the House.

Flaming Crash Kills Five

FLINT, Mich. (UPI)—Flaming gasoline rushed through a major intersection Monday after a tanker collided with a car and overturned, bursting one of its two 11,000 gallon carriers. Five persons were killed and one severely burned.

The gasoline, instantly ignited, destroyed the tandem tanker, two cars, a cement truck on the street and a camper van parked in a service station.

Six Lost In Fire

LA GRANGE, Mo. (UPI) — One of three gasoline barges adrift in the Mississippi River exploded Monday night, sending a vast pillar of flame into the sky which could be seen for eight miles around. At least six men were reported missing. Three persons were reported saved.

Guerrillas, Lebanese Still Apart

From Wire Reports

Talks between Arab guerrillas and Lebanese army officials collapsed Monday when the government refused to remove restrictions on guerrilla groups operating from Lebanon against Israel.

Israel and Jordan exchanged tank and heavy artillery fire three times Monday across the ceasefire line in the area of the King Hussein Bridge, a military spokesman said in Amman.

The Amman spokesman said there were no Jordanian casualties but claimed one Israeli tank and one observation post were destroyed and an artillery emplacement "silenced."

The Lebanese army officials and guerrilla leaders had been meeting in Beirut for the past five days to work out an agreement on guerrilla operating rights from Lebanese territory.

NO AGREEMENT

Informed Palestinian Liberation Organization sources said the talks were inconclusive and no agreement had been reached between the two sides.

Elsewhere:

● Baghdad Radio reported Iraq's revolutionary court sentenced five persons to death after finding them guilty of spying for Iran and Israel. The broadcast said the five were members of a spy ring which had already been uncovered and two of whose leading members had been executed.

● Israel charged that Jews in Arab countries are being ceaselessly persecuted, starved, thrown in jails and harried by mobs, causing "great anxiety" in Tel Aviv. The charge was made by Foreign Minister Abba Eban in replies to questions in the Knesset (Israel's parliament).

Woman Burned In House Fire

A woman was admitted to Royal Jubilee Hospital with minor burns after a bedroom fire at 3611 Tillicum about 2 p.m. Saturday.

Hospital authorities said Mrs. J. A. Balkwill was being treated for first-degree burns to the knees and second-degree burns to the hands. Her two small children escaped injury.

Firemen said the blaze was confined to the bedroom, although there was smoke damage to the remainder of the house. They estimated damage might exceed $1,000.

Fortas Storm Grows

Resignation Tipped For End of Week

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Paul Fanin, (R—Ariz.), said Monday he had "very reliable" information that Abe Fortas will give up his seat this week on the Supreme Court.

Fortas himself was silent on his future but the Memphis Press-Scimitar quoted a source in his Washington office as saying, "Justice Fortas has no intention of resigning at this time."

Attorney general John Mitchell acknowledged he met secretly last week with Chief Justice Earl Warren to present "certain information known by me which might be of aid to him."

Fannin refused to say who told him the Fortas was preparing to quit the court but said, "I consider the person very reliable." The senator said he expected the resignation to come before the week is out.

Mitchell's terse statement appeared to confirm reports that the justice department had gathered information about Fortas' financial affairs even more damaging than his acknowledged acceptance for a time of a fee from the foundation headed by Louis Wolfson, imprisoned last month for illegal stock manipulations.

"As a courtesy to the chief justice, I felt it incumbent upon me to inform him of certain information known by me which might be of aid to him," Mitchell's brief statement said.

Fortas himself went to his native city of Memphis, Tenn., to deliver an address before the Memphis State University student bar association which had been scheduled long before his connection with Wolfson became public knowledge.

NO COMMENT

He declined to comment on Fanin's statement or anything else.

"No thank you," he replied to newsmen who showered questions at him as he strode briskly through an anteroom in the university auditorium.

His address — blaming a lack of understanding for much of the unrest among today's youth — drew a standing ovation.

The Press-Scimitar quoted the source in Fortas' office as saying the justice "made the date in Memphis several months ago and he didn't intend it for a platform to announce his resignation."

Fortas was scheduled to attend the annual meeting of the 1st. U.S. judicial circuit court today at Wentworth-By-The-Sea, N.H.

Fanin would not name the lawyer who told him the justice would bow to continuing demands in Congress that he leave the court.

He said he would not reveal his source when asked if it was a member of Fortas' old law firm of Arnold and Porter, one of the most prominent in Washington.

By late afternoon, the White House said Fortas had sent no communication to President Nixon, to whom he would be expected to address a letter of resignation should he decide to step down.

Through the court's press office, Warren confirmed he met with Mitchell but gave no other detail.

Fireworks Fizzle

Wilson Cools Off Labor Wrath

LONDON (UPI)—Prime Minister Harold Wilson turned aside the wrath of trade union leaders Monday by promising to delay publication of the government's projected labor relations bill.

The concession took the expected fireworks out of an eyeball-to-eyeball confrontation between Wilson and the 40-man general council of the Trades Union Congress — Britain's equivalent of the AFL-CIO.

FIERY AIDE

The premier faced the union leaders at No. 10 Downing Street flanked only by Mrs. Barbara Castle, fiery minister for employment and productivity. Redhaired Mrs. Castle was the author of the plan for trade union reform which the government hopes will end inter-union strife and wildcat strikes.

The leaders of the 8,500,000-strong TUC were incensed particularaly because the government had planned to publish the bill before the House of Commons rises for the short Witsun recess in 10 days time.

JUNE MEETING

The TUC has called a special meeting for June 5 to discuss the bill and it would have regarded publication of the bill before that date as a government attempt to ram it down the union leaders' throats.

But at the outset of Monday night's meeting, Wilson announced he would postpone publication of the bill until after the TUC's meeting. This concession gave the impression that the government, if it deemed fit, would amend the bill to include proposals made by the TUC council which it considered acceptable.

However, the government has stated firmly it intends to push the bill through Parliament before the present session ends in late July. Wilson has stated repeatedly he would amend it only if the TUC leadership produced measures as effective as those proposed by the government.

Leftists Freed By Hong Kong

HONG KONG (Reuters)—The Hong Kong government Monday released the last of 54 Chinese leftists arrested without trial during disturbances in the British colony in 1967.

The last one to be released was Tse-Shuping, vice-chairman of the "anti-persecution struggle committee" and a school supervisor.

The government reduced jail sentences Friday for 11 other Chinese, raising hopes that China might respond by releasing Anthony Grey, the Reuters correspondent in Peking, who has been held under house arrest since July, 1967.

Grey, 30, was put under arrest as a reprisal for the jailing of Chinese newspaper workers involved in the 1967 disturbances. All except Wong Chak, a reporter of the newspaper Kung Pou, were released or are scheduled to be released by the end of this year if granted full remission for good conduct.

Wong was sentenced to five years after the 1967 disturbances.

Another Round

DEVELOPMENTS OF THE PAST four days — including the so-called 10-part peace program offered by the National Liberation Front — have focused world attention once again on Vietnam and the problems of its tortured people. And it is possibly significant that Hanoi allowed its Viet Cong ally to show initiative in this instance, in part to create the impression that the NLF has full status with North Vietnam as a bargaining power and represents an authoritative voice in decisions for the whole country.

Hanoi probably hopes that by giving the Viet Cong the chance to claim authorship of the proposals it will strengthen the argument for establishment of a coalition government in South Vietnam, which is one of the suggested conditions for practical peace talks.

On this point, certainly, the Communist side is likely to be disappointed. Saigon will never consent, at least as the government is currently constituted. And the United States could scarcely approve in those circumstances even if it were prepared to accept the risk.

But there are other aspects of the program which are clearly negotiable. The suggestion for restoration of the demilitarized zone and of prisoner-of-war exchanges, for example, should win an immediate response. And, if it is properly interpreted, so should the proposal for mutual military withdrawal. For in spite of the bland assumption of proprietary rights by the Viet Cong, these three offers originated with the Washington-Saigon partnership.

However, the Communists appear to be determined that if the Paris conversations ever do escape from the dead air which so far has stifled them, they will proceed under the heaviest military pressure that can be maintained. The idea, apparently, is to demonstrate that the North Vietnamese and their Viet Cong ally can assume the initiative whenever and wherever they wish. This may impress East Asian neighbors—Prince Norodam Sihanouk of Cambodia, by his recognition of the Viet Cong because it "represents the South Vietnamese state of the future" has picked his winner—but it might create new difficulties from President Nguyen Van Thieu and President Richard Nixon.

Continued development of the Communist summer offensive, and particlarly the terrorist aspect of the campaign directed chiefly against Saigon itself, will tend to harden the position of President Thieu's government.

President Nixon may clarify his attitude when he speaks on Wednesday. But it is more likely his policy will await full clarification until his Secretary of State William Rogers returns from his current tour of Asian capitals and conversations with chiefs of state and allies there,

The optimistic view is that, having evaluated the Viet Cong-North Vietnamese proposals, the anti-Communist alliance will accept the new approach to a peace formula without paralyzing reservations. They will at least test the sincerity of their opponents. But it would be disheartening if it transpired that the 10-point plan is just another propaganda ploy and a design to win time and sympathy while the Communists punish their enemies.

There is a chance for progress, at least, and President Nixon can be expected to embrace it.

Helpful Hand

VICTORIA MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT David Groos deserves full marks for the good work he has been doing in speeding up the issuance of passports for many of his constituents whose applications had been delayed—some for a matter of months—in Ottawa.

To this newspaper's certain knowledge he has personally handled scores of complaints from Victoria citizens by somehow cutting through all the Ottawa red-tape and other departmental hang-ups to get passports back to their recipients in time — even to the extent of delivering one by hand.

Unlike another Vancouver Island elected member, whose local spokesman claimed there was no delay or trouble over passports on the grounds that External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp had already assured Parliament that passport applications were being processed in less than two weeks, Mr. Groos got down to business to see what he could do to rectify an almost impossible situation.

The result has been that many people have been able to proceed on their overseas holidays or business trips which otherwise would have had to have been cancelled if Mr. Groos had not taken the matter in hand.

As laudable as Mr. Groos' action has been it in no way negates or excuses the stupid and ham-handed method the government he represents has employed in bringing in its new passport regulations. The inconsistencies and unfairness of the new system of documentation should be thoroughly investigated, and at once.

Not to Worry

NOW THAT OTTAWA'S THOUGHTS are dwelling on sky-rocketing government costs—which are met out of the taxpayers's bottomless pocket — some regard might be given to the $700,000 revenue which will be lost by the CBC when it stops allowing the tobacco industry to advertise on its radio and television networks.

Maybe someone might remember that John Q. Citizen is underwriting the CBC to the tune of more than $166,000,000 this year and that if it did not sell advertising time the bill would probably be in the region of $40,000,000 higher.

In announcing the tobacco ban both the CBC and an NDP spokesman claimed that the $700,000 loss could easily be made up by other sponsors. The question now to be asked is: If other sponsor advertisers are so "easily" available to the CBC why weren't they being used before the ban to reduce the burden borne by the taxpayers?

"You, too, St. Christopher?"

Bagby Theory

Moonlets Orbiting Earth

By GERALD LEACH

THE earth has at least 10 natural satellites or "moonlets," circling it. They are up to 100 feet across and may have come from a much larger moonlet that used to orbit the earth until it broke up in December 1955.

This apparently outlandish suggestion is made by John Bagby, a scientist with Hughes Aircraft Corp., in the sober journal Icarus. It is based on a careful study of the way many man-made satellites suddenly change their orbits—itself a new discovery.

The reason, according to Bagby, is that the man-made satellites pass close to the moonlets and are sharply deflected from their original paths.

Though scientists have been saying for more than 50 years that the earth may have other satellites than the moon, the idea has never been accepted. This new evidence, however, is the strongest yet that moonlets do exist.

Believing that there are moonlets, Bagby looked very carefully at the orbits of more than 150 man-made satellites. To his surprise 55 of the satellites made sudden leaps up, down or sideways. For instance, in May, 1965, the apogee (farthest point from earth) of the rocket which launched Telstar 2 dropped from 745 to 670 miles and then jumped back to 745.

Significantly, only high-flying satellites (with apogees greater than 435 miles) made these jumps. These are just the ones least likely to have their orbits drastically altered by known factors such as the atmosphere or bumps on the earth. It seemed that in each case some "thing" higher than 435 miles was kicking them off course.

By piecing these jumps together Bagby calculated the orbits for his moonlets, and found that more than 90 per cent of the jumps occurred when the satellite was "closely intersecting" a moonlet orbit.

But the biggest surprise came when he projected these moonlet orbits backwards, and found that they all diverged from the same point on Dec. 18, 1955. This strongly indicates that the moonlets are the debris of a largish satellite which broke up on that day.

As a final check, Bagby tried to photograph the moonlets, using a moderately powerful telescopic camera. Though he has failed several times, he claims that in March and April last year he got two pictures of objects in the sky exactly where moonlets should be—and where no recorded man-made satellite could have been.

Neutrality Threatened

Lebanon's Security Shaken By Arab Commando Demands

By FREDERICK B. OPPER
from Beirut

CONTINUING clashes with Palestinian guerrillas could have serious economic repercussions in Lebanon, where trade is king.

Fearing more Israeli reprisals like the commando raid on Beirut International Airport last December, the Lebanese army has been ordered to crack down on Palestinian guerrillas operating in southern Lebanon, near the Israeli border.

This country throughout history has existed on trade, business and the fast buck.

Back in the dawn of history the Lebanese, then known as Phoenicians, or Canaanites as they called themselves, may well have been the greatest race of traders the world has ever known. They covered the known earth from Southern Africa and Central Asia to the British Isles.

Their ships went everywhere carrying textiles, silverware, amber, dyes, iron, copper, fine linen for Egyptian pharaohs, tin, gold, glass, ebony, slaves, emeralds, livestock, spices, wine and wheat. They lived largely by crisscrossing the seas transporting goods from one people to another.

They were not overly popular, as the man who takes 5 per cent is frequently disliked. But they brought the ancient world far closer together than it had been before they appeared on the scene as its seafarers and traders. They may not have invented the alphabet but they took it with them, as well as their knowledge of navigation, winds, currents and trade routes.

The Bible says of the Phoenicians: "When thy wares went forth out of the seas, thou filledst many people; thou didst enrich the kings of the earth with the multitude of thy riches and of they merchandise."

Today that heritage of trade is Lebanon's main reason for existence, the reason the country is the wealthiest of the Arab states save for the oil-rich sheikhdoms.

It is also the reason businessmen here fear for their economic future in the light of the recent politico-military turmoil.

Lebanon is a country that lives on trade and stability. Take away the stability, the trade will decrease, and Lebanon's future becomes bleak, for two-thirds of the country's gross national product comes from services. There is some citrus fruit production, and wheat covers half the population's needs, but agricultural output is far from adequate, and industry is in an infant state. So business is the crutch on which the Lebanese economy has depended.

This city is the great entrepreneur. It is the transit point for the whole Middle East. The oil pipeline from Iraq ends here, Beirut's port and airport take in the goods that go to the Arab states of the East, and on all that passes through the Lebanese make a profit. Closure of the Suez Canal tipped even more trade than normal Lebanon's way.

Beirut has been a post-Second World War centre of wheeling and dealing. There are no government restrictions on monetary exchanges. Currency of every country, gold bars, diamonds and real estate are bought and sold freely. No controls exist on exports or imports. Your conscience is your guide here, which offers plenty of leeway.

Lebanon, as a result, became a haven for people and money of the Middle East. Syrians, Iraqis, Egyptians, sheikhs from the Persian Gulf, all felt safer in Lebanon than at home, particularly after their disastrous war with Israel in 1967. They felt their money safer, too, as witness the fact that $250 million fled Syria, a nation of only five million people, in eight years.

From it all Lebanon waxed rich, though there were financial storm clouds for those who looked.

Intrabank, the largest bank in the country that had a hand in almost every commercial enterprise there, collapsed three years ago. It had no source of long-term credit nor assets that could be negotiated easily. High interest rates in Europe began to beckon depositors, credit extensions were refused, and Intrabank crashed.

The government then began to tighten the banking system, and the Central Bank was authorized to take over banks lacking liquid assets. Ten such banks were thus gobbled up. At present there are a mere 76 different banks in Beirut, as aginst a high of 90.

The Arab-Israeli war cut Lebanon's tourist trade with those passing to or from the Holy Places in Jordan. Tourists from other Arab states fleshed out the picture somewhat, but the loss of Western tourists was not totally made up.

Through it all, however, Lebanon maintained a political stability and sophistication unknown elsewhere among its Arab neighbors. It kept from involvement in the Arab-Israeli conflict as much as it could, some of its leading political figures even calling for the country to be a Switzerland in the Middle East.

It tried to muzzle the vociferous Palestinian refugees here who are the recruiting nucleus for the Arab commandos. And it solved its political difference under civilized ground rules unlike its neighbors where such differences are frequently solved by shooting the president or the opposition.

A great crack appeared in this solid foundation last December when Israeli helicopters raided the Beirut airport.

As a result the government fell, and students paraded the streets calling for greater support for the commandos and a stronger pro-Arab policy. A feeling of unease touched the country.

Now the stability that was Lebanon's greatest asset is seriously shaken. Traders and businessmen who live on the secure feeling that tomorrow will be like today are having second thoughts now about this country. And the fast buck that has been the Phoenician-Lebanese aim since the dawn of time may become a worthless counterfeit.

Brainchild of Steelmen

Indestructible Home Arrives

TERMITES would starve to death in a model home recently constructed in Buena Park, California.

The house has steel doors, a steel structural frame, steel wall studs, steel roof-decking, and steel ornaments. Even the carpets are reinforced with steel fibre.

More than 50 tons of steel make the 4,000-square-foot home the heaviest in the neighborhood. "Nothing can destroy it," said the architect who designed the showplace for the American Iron and Steel Institute.

The sturdy house symbolizes the current revolution in the steel industry, the National Geographic Society says.

Manufacturers claim that research has produced more technological improvements in the last 15 years than in any other equal period in history. Among the innovations: steel plate so thin that it's transparent.

More significant, however, may be the recent introduction of a massive steelmaking unit called a continuous slab caster.

The 90-foot-high machine, used by the United States Steel Corporation at its sprawling plant in Gary, Indiana, can spew out a single wide ribbon of red-hot steel weighing about 1,600 tons — more than five-times the nonstop capability of previous casters.

The machine means tremendous savings in manufacturing costs, a corporation official said.

Until only a century or so ago, steelmaking remained slow and costly. The famed steel citadel at Sheffield, England, for example, took 14 full days to convert pig iron into 40 or 50 pounds of steel.

In the mid-19th century, Sir Henry Bessemer of England and William Kelly, a Irish-American, developed a process to make ten tons of steel an hour. The Bessemer process dominated the industry for half a century, until more efficient open-hearth furnaces were introduced.

Open hearth furnaces have held the lead in production since 1909, but they are steadily losing ground to a recent innovation, the basic oxygen process.

Basic oxygen furnaces, eight times faster and $8 a ton cheaper than open hearths, account for more than a third of the 150 million tons of steel produced annually in the United States.

Steel is used in hundreds of thousands of products, from bobby pins and barbed wire to ships and skyscrapers. Some 57,000 tons went into the Empire State Building. The main structure of the Golden Gate Bridge used almost 100,000 tons.

Many tons go into tin cans, actually about 99 per cent steel and 1 per cent noncorrosive tin. The steel in the 55 billion cans produced in 1968 would pave a four-lane highway that encircled the globe three times.

New techniques have scored a breakthrough in tin-can technology, too. Soft-drink manufacturers have begun using "tin" cans that are 100 per cent steel.

With a Worried Frown

U.S. Contemplates Problems of Asia

By EDWARD NEILAN from Hong Kong

Solution of the Vietnam war or United States extrication from Indochina will not mean the end of problems in Asia.

The trusty rejoinder when discussing the torment of Asia is that repeated by a European diplomat here: "Bring Communist China into the world fold and you've got your problems solved."

But to many analysts that is too pat an answer.

In fact, many qualified observers in this part of the world feel that U.S.-Japan relations, rather than Sino-American relations, are potentially the most significant for the 1970s.

There are good reasons that substantiate this argument.

Japan is one of the world's great powers industrially and has the capacity to assist the developing nations of Asia pull themselves into the 20th Century.

The key is whether Washington and Tokyo can smoothly find solutions to problems like the reversion of Okinawa, Japanese domestic political opposition to the U.S.-Japan Security Treaty, and Japan's foot-dragging on trade and investment liberalization.

Aside from the delicate problems with Japan and the stalled state of affairs with Communist China, what does the United States face in Asia in the way of foreign policy porblems?

Here is a brief country-by-country glimpse of the issues:

NORTH KOREA

The Pyongyang regime shows no signs of diminishing its belligerence which so far has accounted for the seizure of a U.S. intelligence vessel, downing of a U.S. reconnaissance plane, an attempt on the life of the South Korean president, and repeated thrusts across the Demilitarized Zone into South Korea and coast landings by terrorists.

SOUTH KOREA

Increasing threats from the north mean the United States must continue economic support of the Seoul government through trade and investment stimulation as grant aid phases out. Tendency of Koreans to tinker with the constitution could cause political unrest and a difficult situation for United States.

NATIONALIST CHINA

Taiwan appears to be no problem on the surface. The economy is surging and the population is content. But the nation is at the core of the China issue and the advancing age of President Chiang Kai-shek raises apprehensions about the situation once he is gone.

PHILIPPINES

Nationalistic fervor is on the rise again as the expiration date of the Laurel-Langley Agreement nears in 1974. The agreement gives U.S. firms investment parity with Filipino firms and doubts about its renewal have slowed American investment, increased friotions over U.S. bases.

LAOS

North Vietnam is blatantly encroaching in this trouble spot. Although the United States is not bound by any treaty to protect Laos the American presence is more than "token."

Example: There are 70 U.S. military attaches assigned to the country.

THAILAND

Bangkok is watching which way the United States jumps after the Vietnam war. Here as elsewhere, a sudden American change would cause political convulsions. As with Japan, Korea, Nationalist China and the Philippines, the United States is committed by treaty to protect Thailand from the Communists.

SOUTH VIETNAM

There is still no end in sight to war and expectations are that Hanoi is going to make it very tough for the Nixon administration to disengage on suitable terms. Excitement among U.S. companies over offshore oil exploration along the Vietnam coast will help insure American investment presence in a post-war era.

CAMBODIA

Prince Norodom Sihanouk has a problem of Communist subversion. North Vietnamese troops' free use of Cambodia complicates the military situation in South Vietnam.

INDIA

The economy continues to stagnate with the Soviet Union encouraging continuance of unproductive state-run industries. Any flare-up along either the Sino-Indian or India-Pakistan border would find the Indians looking to Washington for help.

PAKISTAN

The Pakistanis are getting the big rush from both China and the the Soviet Union. The United States must stay in the competition and has accordingly resumed sales of spare parts for Pakistani tanks that were stopped in the brief India-Pakistan war of 1965.

In that one, both nations used American weapons — delivered as anti-Communist protection — against each other.

INDONESIA

The economy is inching ahead but a Communist comeback is always a possiblity. At the moment Indonesia is more of a challenge to American business than a political problem.

Regionally, problems such as galloping Soviet influence, contributions to the Asian Development Bank, and the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization stare the Nixon administration in the face.

The Russians have in short order established diplomatic relations with the Philippines, Malaysia and Singapore. New air routes have been approved across Siberia to Japan and via Tashkent to Singapore. Soviet trawlers are everywhere in Asian waters.

The Asian Development Bank, one of several multinational financial bodies, raises special problems. U.S. congressmen demand to know why America spends funds for the Asian bank when money is unavailable for certain domestic projects. Shifting of emphasis from government participation to promotion of U.S. private enterprise consortium investments may be a way out of this tangle.

When foreign ministers — including U.S. Secretary of State William P. Rogers — meet in Bangkok late in May for the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO) conference, there could be some fireworks. The Philippines, for one, wants to know if the United States intends to "retire" from the organization or will join in "revitalizing" it.

SEATO has been a flop as far as collective military response goes in Asia, but has some merits for education and scientific co-operation.

Whatever else may be said about Asia, there can be no claim for a shortage of problems.

Chinese Puzzle

Strange Ultimatum

By P. S. NIRASH from Gangtok, Sikkim

THE Chinese ultimatum at the end of April, telling Indian troops in the tiny protectorate of Sikkim "to vacate Chinese territory or else . . ." has indicated this as the most explosive part of India's 2,500 mile frontier with China.

But something of a Chinese puzzle has developed in the Chhumbi Valley — the wedge of Tibetan territory which juts out towards Darjeeling between the Himalayan kingdoms of Sikkim and Bhutan.

The behavior of the Chinese military command in the Chhumbi Valley appears to defy all the set patterns of Peking policy (unpredictable though that is at times). It has given rise to speculation that the local commanders may be acting off their own bat or even in opposition to Peking.

First, there were some peculiar features about the April ultimatum itself. It was broadcast over the frontier public address system at Nathu-La. But no notice was taken of it by Radio Lhasa, Radio Peking or the official New China News Agency.

When protests were made in New Delhi to the Chinese charge d'affaires, the man from Peking pleaded complete ignorance of the event. Observers are now comparing the ultimatum with a previous one given on the Sikkim-Tibet border in September 1967, when the Chinese threatened to use their air force if Indians did not stop an artillery duel. Then, the Indians obeyed, but far from seizing upon this propaganda victory, Peking accused India of making up the ultimatum threat as a "slanderous fabrication."

Another mystery surrounds the portrait of Chairman Mao, which has appeared and disappeared on the border in recent years. In January 1967, Indians noticed it had been torn. In the September duel the Mao portrait was shot to bits (by which side no one knows) and now stands as a gaping empty frame.

The Chhumbi Valley puzzle may tie in with reports from Tibet of continuing clashes between Maoists and anti-Maoists in big cities like Lhasa and Gyantse and the Chamdo region. Both sides are reportedly using small arms, machineguns and grenades. The only source of arms, say observers, is the Chinese People's Liberation Army itself.

Observers here believe that Chinese activity on the Sikkim border, however, is mainly designed to pin down a substantial Indian force and to alienate Sikkim if possible from India. It may be that the local military command have a free reign in the tactics they use toward these ends.

Deaths of Russian Generals Nothing to Get Excited About

By TONY CLIFTON from London

In the past three weeks, the authoritative London Times has reported the deaths of a countress, a viscountess, a baroness, two lords, two baronets, a knight and the widows of eight knights.

It seems possible that these deaths, coupled with widespread student rioting, disaffection with the British government and the bloody battles in Ulster indicate that at last the British proletariat have begun to throw off the bloodstained shackles of the aristocratic governing clique.

The fall of the Catholic imperialist de Gaulle in France suggests that all Western Europe is ready to join in fraternal solidarity with the USSR.

Experienced observers have also noted that the Queen and members of her family recently left the country on what was officially described as "a state visit" to Austria.

... So a Russian reporter working for the Navosibirshk Bugle might have interpreted the events in Britain over the past three weeks. These things all happened and without any other data it would appear at least, to have been a bad time for knights' widows.

Yet something like this means of interpretatation seems to have been used in North America and Europe in the past few days to explain the deaths of the 11 Russian generals.

Some writers have suggested that the deaths may have been caused in a gigantic accident, like a plane crash or rocket explosion. Others have speculated that the generals were implicated in a vast spy ring or other subversive activity, and another group favors the theory that the officers in question have been purged by the politicians who are becoming disturbed by the growing power of the army.

What most people have failed to take into account is that the number of aging generals in Russia is enormous. In 1945 the Russian army numbered 20,000,000 men, and there were about 11,000 generals. Most of these men are now retired and well over 60. Last year 37 had died by May, this year in fact, the number is slightly lower — about 33.

So most of them, like old soldiers, just faded away. A question remains about three — Air Force General Kadomtsev, who was only 49, and Engineer Generals Smirnov, 50, and Dmitriev, 58. It seems most unlikely that all three should have dide naturally in the past three weeks.

Kadomtsev was said to have died "tragically" and the other deaths are premature, at least. As one was a rising air force general and the other two engineers, it would seem likely that they died in some sort of accident, possibly a plane crash or a premature rocket explosion. Such accidents are rarely publicised because they reflect on the efficiency of the armed services.

What seems certain is that there hasn't been a purge. Troublemakers never get an obituary, they suddenly disappear and are never heard of again. The fact that everyone seems to be dying suggests that there's nothing wrong with the Russian army.

Biologist Advances Case for Aiding Humanity By Tampering with Peoples Genetic Patterns

LAT, from Pasadena, Calif.

Man-made genetic changes that could lead to cures for some diseases are now understood, in principle, and could be put to use to help humanity despite fears of controlled genetic manipulation of people, according to Dr. Robert L. Sinsheimer, biology department chairman at California Institute of Technology.

Because of recent advances in understanding the biochemistry of heredity and the processes of evoluation man now is able to see how he consciously could alter and design his inheritance — to bring about man-made changes in either the nature or behavior of the DNA — genes contained in the inherited chromosomes, he says.

For the first time, men who have inherited normal DNA-genes from their parents can begin to think of specific ways to alleviate the suffering and disease of men who have been "losers in the chromosomal lottery" — who have inherited abnormal DNA-genes.

Although the technical details of how this man-made evolution could be accomplished remain vague at present, Dr. Sinsheimer points out, "I think this possibility — of designed genetic change, specifically of mankind — which we now glimpse only in fragmented outline, is potentially one of the most important concepts to arise in the history of mankind.

"I want to use the phrase 'genetic change,' in a broad sense, in the sense of altering some physiologocal or psychological process which at present we believe has been programmed into us through our inheritance.

"I can think of no concept with greater long-range implications for the future of our species. Indeed, this concept marks a turning point in the whole evolution of life. For the first time, in all time, a living creature understands its origin and can undertake to design its future."

Sinsheimer says, "Though the analogy is not perfect I feel strongly akin to the physicists who pointed out in the 1930s that the principles required for the release of the energy locked in the atomic nucleus were understood.

"All that was needed was a practical breakthrough and the requisite technology. Here, too (in genetics), the principles seem in hand. All that seems really needed is optimism, sustained effort, and the support commensurate with the importance of the problem.

"The large and deeper challenges — those concerned with the defined genetic improvement of man — perhaps fortunately are not yet in our grasp, but they are etched clear upon the horizon. We should begin to prepare now for their reality.

"All that seems needed is the technology and the resolution to transfer to man what we already know to be feasible in bacteria or carrot cells or frogs.

Arabs Launch War of Words Against Israelis—in Africa

By STANLEY MEISLER
From Nairobi

The Arab nations are trying to convince black Africans that Israel and white supremacist South Africa are two of a kind.

With this campaign, which began several years ago and seems to be intensifying now, the Arabs hope to discredit the Israelis and their foreign aid program. For the past decade, the Israelis have mounted a fairly successful aid program aimed at wooing black Africans and their votes at the United Nations.

The campaign receives indirect support from South Africa. At times, the white Afrikaners who rule South Africa like to identify with Israel.

In their view, Israel is a bastion of western civilization against a horde of Arabs just as South Africa is a bastion of western civilization against a horde of blacks.

The comparison, by both the Arabs and the Afrikaners, annoys Israel. Some Israeli officials, however, acknowledge that their country has a special problem of relationship with South Africa because of the number of Jews there.

South Africa has the 10th largest Jewish community in the world. It supplies significant foreign exchange and many immigrants to Israel.

Israelis generally agree that the Arab campaign has failed. In fact, Israel has far more trouble with South Africa than with black Africa and Israel invariably votes against South Africa in the United Nations.

A typical attempt to link Israel with South Africa was made recently by the Egyptian embassy in Nairobi. In a letter to a local newspaper, S. El-Zarki, the Egyptian press attache, wrote that the Arab stand toward Israel "is similar to the African one towards both Rhodesia and South Africa, who share with Israel the same history of foreign settlers, racial policy and political ends."

"No wonder," El-Zarki went on, "when we view the presence of more than 116,000 Jews in South Africa, dominating its economy and politics."

The Egyptian then said that "racial discrimination against the 250,000 Arabs still residing in Israel is comparable with that in South Africa against Africans."

Israelis dismiss this, insisting that under the law, Arabs in Israel have equal rights, including the right to vote, run for office and earn equal pay.

The Israeli denial is less vehement against the accusation that Israel and South Africa have similar strands of history.

Most Israelis, however, see one significant difference. White South Africa is using the labor of the blacks. The Jews, on the other hand, are developing Israel by themselves.

"When the South Africans learn to do their own work," an Israeli said in Tel Aviv, "then maybe they can say there is a comparison with us. But not now, when they are living off the blacks."

Most evidence indicates that the Arabs have been unsuccessful in their attempt to identify Israel with South Africa. Black Africans have had enough contact with Israelis to reject the propaganda that Israelis believe in apartheid.

Low Negro IQ Theory Again Ignored

Scientists Won't Play Ball

By ARCH MacKENZIE, FROM Washington

The National Academy of Sciences, the foremost United States scientific body, has refused again to consider a scientific theory injecting controversy into the country's racial tensions.

The hypothesis is that Negroes are born with less intelligence than whites — that as a race they aren't as smart.

The academy consists of about 850 top scientists selected as governmental advisers. In closed session here, for the third year running, it refused a proposal to expand studies on whether the black race by its inherited characteristics is handicapped in intelligence.

This was the latest episode in a controversy about a touchy subject, sparked earlier this year in a lengthy paper by Dr. Arthur R. Jensen, an educational psychologist at the University of California.

Jensen, on the basis of statistics, concluded that Negroes tend to average 15 points below whites in most intelligence tests. American Indians consistently scored higher than Negroes, his research claims.

His main point was that educationists are on the wrong track in trying to apply enriched remedial education programs to low-income Negro children. The low-income Negro requires special education, he suggested, but because he thinks differently and reasons less intelligently rather than being handicapped by his environment.

The reaction to the Jensen theory has been wide-spread and varied.

Negroes have reacted angrily. One of the more restrained comments was from Dr. William F. Brazziel of Virginia State University who said he believes Jensen is wrong "and I hope he does not do too much damage."

Right-wing extremists leaped on the Jensen paper to justify their view that the Negro is an inferior human being. More responsible right-wing spokesmen such as columnist James E. Kilpatrick used it to argue against the integrated schooling authorized by the historic 1954 Supreme Court ruling.

Kilpatrick said a "difference in aptitude and achievement remains, even in Northern schools where white and black have been subjected to identical learning opportunities."

Scientist Joshua Lederberg notes that a New York test, giving special vitamin and mineral concentrations to pregnant women in low-income groups, has shown increased IQs for their offspring.

That's a plus for supporters of the argument that malnutrition — or environment — moulds intelligence. Many of the 21,000,000 American Negroes suffer from malnutrition.

C. P. Snow, the British author and physicist, told a New York audience recently he is prepared to believe there is "something in the Jewish gene-pool which produces talent on quite a different scale from, say, the Anglo-Saxon gene-pool."

The Jewish record of achievement was "quite remarkable."

But he declined to discuss the Negro question raised by Jensen and said "the findings should not have been dramatized until there is absolute scientific justification."

Here's one way to save money on phone calls

...Sleep in your car! Doug didn't think there was any need to waste 75¢ phoning ahead for reservations. When he arrived, at dusk, there wasn't a bed in the resort. So he had to settle for a parking stall overnight at the friendly freeway gas station—the one where the all-night truck drivers fill up. What the picture doesn't show (mercifully, perhaps!) is Doug's wife and three kids...they're back with the car, still trying to straighten out their kinks. It's smart to make reservations in advance. Why risk following in Doug's footsteps when long distance costs so little? When you hit the road each day, remember the most important thing of all: phone ahead to make sure of your bed.

Nixon: No Troop Cut

said. He got this feeling not only from visible signs but "I am told by others in higher authority that there are other elements that can cause optimism," he said. He did not elaborate.

There has been widespread speculation that Nixon will soon bring home some of the 542,000 U.S. troops in Vietnam. He is under increasing pressure to demonstrate some progress toward ending the war and such a move also would demonstrate confidence in the South Vietnamese government and Nixon's desire to scale down the fighting.

In Paris, Communist diplomatic sources said Monday North Vietnamese and Viet Cong negotiators at the peace talks would insist the allies discuss the Viet Cong's new 10-point peace plan as a package or not at all.

South Vietnamese negotiators said they were ready to open talks on some aspects of the program immediately, but rejected other parts as unacceptable.

The Communist informants said the Viet Cong plan was a "global" project and that North Vietnam and the Viet Cong would reject any attempt by the United States to negotiate some of the points separately.

Officials of the National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong, appeared unhappy Monday about Saigon's quick rejection of some of the 10 points — Communist insistence on a coalition government, unconditional withdrawal of U.S. troops and meutrality for South Vietnam.

This was considered the main section of the Viet Cong peace plan, presented to the Paris conference May 8.

South Vietnamese officials Monday reiterated Saigon's blunt refusal to scuttle the present regime of President Thieu in favor of a transition cabinet as demanded by the Viet Cong.

MILITARY ASPECTS

But the Saigon officials reaffirmed their government's willingness to open immediate talks on military aspects of the Viet Cong package — restoration of the demilitarized zone, establishment of prisoner exchanges and re-establishment of Laotian neutrality under terms of the 1962 Geneva accords.

From Saigon came word that Viet Cong guerrilla and North Vietnamese gunners launched a second night of attacks on military positions in South Vietnam Monday, slamming at least three rockets into the big Tan Son Nhut air base outside Saigon.

The new assault came after the heaviest day of Viet Cong-North Vietnamese strikes since the great Tet (lunar new year) offensive of February, 1968. In a 24-hour period, 159 military positions and South Vietnamese towns were raked.

It was reported the rockets hit the northern side of Tan Son Nhut, a considerable distance from the plane parking areas and military installations along the southern edge. The rockets were said to be of the 107-millimetre type, with a four-mile range.

The big base, which serves as Saigon's airport as well as a combined American and South Vietnamese government air depot, has in the past been a favorite target of attacks.

Two more Viet Cong grenade attacks were reported in the capital Monday night wounding six persons. Military spokesmen said two suspects were seized.

TOO EARLY

The United States command said it is "too early to tell" whether the Communist command has kicked off the general summer offensive mentioned in captured Viet Cong documents.

Other Viet Cong documents said the bomb and grenade attacks which have been plaguing Saigon since last Wednesday, are scheduled to continue until May 19, the 79th birthday of North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh.

two of his appearances in the film are to be edited out of the final version. But he refused to give his political opponents the credit for the changes—he called them "adjustments."

"That criticism came from my own family," Mr. Bennett said.

He added that he was quite willing to show the film to welfare recipients in the province (a reference to the comment made earlier by NDP leader Tom Berger that The Good Life ignores many difficulties facing less fortunate B.C. residents).

"A lot of people on welfare have already seen the film," Mr. Bennett said. "They are not well off, but they are better off than elsewhere, with the best mediocre program in the world,' the best hospital insurance, and our education system."

Border Talk Urged

sides resume navigation talks, broken off since last year.

If the meeting of the "Sino-Soviet joint commission for navigation on boundary rivers" at Khabarovsk—which the Chinese call Poli—is successful, it could lead to negotiations on the border problem in general.

The Chinese have not rejected the principle of negotiations on the frontier dispute. In his political report to the ninth congress of the Communist party, Vice-Chairman Lin Piao announced that the Chinese government is "considering its reply" to a Soviet offer of March 29 for "consultations" on this problem.

Observers believed that the Chinese, in agreeing to the navigation talks, also wished to undercut any Soviet charges of Chinese "aggressiveness" at the world conference of Communist parties opening in Moscow on June 5.

In the Chinese note sent Sunday, Chen Fa-ping, the Chinese chairman of the 18-year-old joint commission, rejected the Soviet charge that China is responsible for the breakdown of the 15th commission meeting held last year.

The Soviet charge "cannot but make one doubt how much sincere desire the Soviet side has for convening this (new) meeting," the note said.

KAISER RESOURCES LTD.

The Kaiser Companies have gained worldwide experience in the development of resources such as coal, iron ore, bauxite, nickel, limestone and many other raw materials. Because of this experience, and because the name Kaiser Coal did not truly reflect our capabilities and enthusiasm, we've changed our name to Kaiser Resources Ltd.

Not that we didn't enjoy an exciting first year as Kaiser Coal. In early 1968, we signed a contract with the Japanese steel industry for the export of more than 45 million long tons of British Columbia coal, over the next 15 years. Since then, contracts have been signed for substantial additional shipments of coal to Japan.

This new export business for Canada was made possible by the cooperation and encouragement of many groups in Canada, including both the British Columbia government and the Federal government—but without subvention or subsidy of any kind. As a result of these combined efforts, the following actions are taking place:

Total direct investment necessary to build the new mine, railroad and port facilities needed to meet these commitments, has been estimated at more than $150 million of expenditures by Kaiser, the railroads and others involved in the venture.

Some 800 Canadian construction workers are building our new mining facilities in the East Kootenay Mountains near Fernie, B.C. Annual payroll for these workers, along with our 625 current coal production employees, exceeds $11 million.

By the time major shipments are started in 1970, 800 full-time employees will be provided steady employment in producing the coal with an annual payroll estimated at $7 million.

Major changes and improvements in housing, community and living conditions have already been made in the communities of Michel, Natal, and Sparwood, B.C.

We already have plans underway for a full-scale program for the reclamation of areas involved in surface mining. As part of our conservation efforts, we have established a scholarship program for research at the University of British Columbia.

A major program is underway to develop better methods of underground mining, including hydraulic and longwall mining, under safe and clean conditions. These new techniques could greatly extend the reserves of mineable coal.

Early next year, the Canadian Pacific Railway will be running round-the-clock unit-train operations to haul coal from the mine to a new superport being built at Roberts Bank near Vancouver. This will be one of the most efficient railroad operations in the entire world and Roberts Bank will provide North America's finest bulk handling port, capable of loading the mammoth superships needed to transport the coal to Japan.

We feel fortunate to be participating in this exciting project. The whole venture should prove to be a source of tremendous revenue to Canada. We also feel that there are many other growth opportunities to match the skills of the Canadian people with available resources and, as Kaiser Resources Ltd., we are building an organization of Canadians to meet these opportunities. Our worldwide experience has shown us that the development of resources can make a substantial contribution to the welfare of the people of the countries where the raw materials are produced. Wherever economically possible these products are processed in the countries where they are mined.

The Kaiser Companies have always been guided by two maxims. They may seem merely old-fashioned platitudes to others; but they have worked for us time and time again. The first is: "Find a Need and Fill It." As our world grows smaller, its needs grow larger. We feel confident that working with the resources and people of this country, we can compete in the global markets of tomorrow and help Canada to grow and prosper.

The second Kaiser maxim is: "Together We Build."

Poher to Carry Unity Standard

Poher

PARIS (Reuters) — Interim president, Alain Poher, a 60-year-old, well known for devotion to European unity, announced Monday he will run in the June election, seeking the seat of Charles de Gaulle.

Poher said he's running for the presidency as a candidate of "union and reconciliation of Frenchmen", and will continue as interim head of state during the election campaign.

He has emerged as the only candidate likely to stop the favorite, Georges Pompidou, de Gaulle's former premier.

Canada's Air Space Asset for Defence

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian air space, airfields and communications would be "very valuable assets" in the efficient operation of a new continental air defence plan, says a paper prepared in the defence department.

★ ★ ★

The paper, circulated to members of the Commons defence committee, says the vital requirement for anti-bomber defence is space—"Space for interception well before the targets, and space beyond this for early warning."

If attacking bombers are to be intercepted before they launch missiles against ground targets, "the requirement for space is correspondingly extended."

The most likely routes to targets in either the United tates or Canada are from the northern periphery.

An airborne warning and control system, based on radar-carrying surveillance aircraft, together with over-the-horizon ground radars allow defences to be extended outwards.

"If the plan is to be put into effect, it is evident that AWACS aircraft and the interceptors will need to fly over Canada," says the paper.

The document was expected to be discussed at a meeting of the defence committee today by Dr. George Lindsey, chief of the defence research analysis establishment of the Defence Research Board.

The Canadian government has not yet decided whether to take part in the new air defence plan now being evolved in the U.S.

Pope Criticized

Naples' Saint Holds Schedule

NAPLES, ITALY (Reuters) — Thousands of jubilant Neapolitans said Sunday they witnessed a miracle by their patron saint two days after Pope Paul demoted him in the new Roman Catholic calendar.

A substance in a phial, reputedly containing the blood of St. Januarius, liquified in Naples Cathedral before a packed congregation of the faithful, many of them still weeping over their patron's demotion from obligatory to optional veneration in the world calendar of the Roman Catholic Church.

FOR EIGHT DAYS

A cathedral spokesman said the substance in the phial had liquified every day for the last eight days. Scientists have examined the phenomenon several times but have never been able to explain it.

According to local tradition, St. Januarius, a fourth century martyr who is credited with delivering Naples from the plague in 1497 and from preventing the city's destruction by the volcano Vesuvius in 1631, performs the miracle three times a year.

The dates are the first Saturday in May and the following eight days, commemorating the transfer of his relics to Naples from nearby Pozzuoli; Sept. 19, his feast day, and Dec. 16, the anniversary of the Vesuvius eruption.

CAIRO (Reuters) — Eastern rite Catholic churches have criticized Pope Paul's decision to streamline the new Roman Catholic calendar by dropping or demoting about 200 saints.

Greek Orthodox church sources said Sunday the Pope has no right to doubt the sainthood of any Christian martyr and they will not be bound by his decision.

ANCIENT DATA

Documents about the saints, which Pope Paul said Friday are often incomplete, were available to popes who preceded Pope Paul in the last 1,500 years, the sources said.

One Greek Orthodox monk here took issue with the Pope's decision to exclude St. Catherine because of doubtful origins.

Derailment Of Train Injures 20

ST. BRUNO, Que. (UPI)—At least 20 persons suffered minor injuries Monday when four cars of a Canadian National Railways train derailed at a level crossing in this south shore Montreal suburb.

Railway officials said none of the injuries appeared serious, but 20 to 25 persons were taken to hospitals in the area. Most suffered cuts and bruises or were shaken up by the crash.

There were 72 persons aboard when the train derailed.

The train was a five-car local from Campbellton, N.B., and Quebec City due in Montreal at 4 p.m. EDT. The derailment occurred about 3:45 p.m. at a point where the tracks cross a main road near the St. Bruno station.

The accident snarled both rail and automobile commuter traffic to the south shore "bedroom" suburbs.

Prices Sag At Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The market posted a fractional decline in active trading.

The market opened mixed but slipped in later trading.

Canadian Breweries gained ½ to 10⅝ in active trading. othman was unchanged at 25.

Both companies are involved in a plan by Philip Morris Inc. to buy control of Canadian Breweries.

Cominco was up ⅛ to 37. Northgate lost ⅝ to 18¼ and Western Mines 5 cents to $3.65.

Copper Stocks Mixed

VANCOUVER—Highland Valley coppers were mixed with Valley Copper losing 1 at 20½ and Buttle rising .65 to 7.35.

Coast Silver added .25 to 1.80 and Alice Lake .17 to 2.40. Kamloops added 5½ cents at .30.

Oils were mixed while Cunningham, Fields, EDP and Okanagan Helicopters were higher among industrials.

Rally by Banks

Banks, which led losses steadily last week, climbed. Papers slid most.

Bank of Nova Scotia rose ⅝ to 24 and Royal Bank ⅝ to 22½, while Toronto-Dominion lost ⅛ to 20⅝. Bank of Montreal was unchanged at 15¼ and Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at 20⅝.

In senior mines and oils, Union Oil gained 1 to 48½, Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting ⅜ to 87 and French Pete 25 cents ot 9.00.

New York Lower

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market, again under profit-taking pressure, slid to another loss — its second straight.

The decline, brokers said, apparently was a continuation of last week's activity in which investors started to cash in on gains run up during the recent rally.

The New York exchange index was off 0.09 at 58.67.

Leasco Data Processing, most active on the Big Board on 251,800 shares, was off .2 to 38. Thirteen of the 20 most active issues declined and 7 advanced.

Bank of B.C. Spreads Its Wings

Steady progress is being made by the Bank of B.C. now going into its second year as an operative bank in the province.

In the six months to April 30, total assets grew by 30 per cent to $44,000,000 and A. E. Hall, chairman and president, said savings deposits had more than doubled and the number of accounts was growing satisfactorily.

He said the bank is in a strong liquid position and has room to take on other good borrowing accounts.

He also announced an International Courtesy Card had been developed and would shortly be available.

Holders would be able to draw on correspondent branches of the Bank of B.C. in Hawaii, Mexico, Hong Kong, London, New York and in most of the states in the Pacific Northwest and California.

SOUND BASIS

The cards will enable holders to cash cheques on the Bank of B.C. in these countries without further identification.

The bank, according to Mr. Hall, continues to operate on a sound and profitable basis. Many non-recurring expenses have been incurred in the initial year, but these have been paid for and improvement in earnings is anticipated in the current year.

BATTLE OF BREWERIES

Two tobacco companies are staging a tug-of-war seeking to win control of the well-financed Canadian Breweries, one of the giants of the world's brewing companies.

They are Philip Morris of the U.S. and Rothmans of Pall Mall of Canada.

In a weekend development, Morris announced it would pay $12 a share for half the outstanding Canadian Breweries shares, totalling 10,881,000 and valued at $130,000,000.

George Weissman, president of Philip Morris, said the offer would be mailed to Canadian Breweries shareholders in the next few weeks. He added the shares would be taken up on a pro-rata basis, but declined to say whether Philip Morris would buy more than 50 per cent.

Meanwhile in the Commons, Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford said the offer of Philip Morris to take over Canadian Breweries does not appear to be a breach of the combines act.

Rothmans is currently the largest single shareholder of Canadian Breweries. It bought from Argus Corporation last year 2,400,000 shares (11 per cent of the total outstanding) at the same price as is now being offered by Morris.

IN EUROPE

John Devlin, president of Rothmans and chairman of the board of Canadian Breweries, was said to be in Europe and not available for comment.

J. G. Campbell, president of Canadian Breweries, said his directors had only just heard of the offer, and gave no indication of what his board's action would be.

Weissman said no approach had been made by Philip Morris to buy the Canadian Breweries shares now owned by Rothmans.

AT PRESENT

He also stated flatly that his company at present held no shares in Canadian Breweries, or any other brewing company.

This statement heightens the mystery as to who has been buying shares of Canadian Breweries on the open market during the past two or three weeks. Several millions of the 21,700,000 CB shares have changed hands during that period at prices between $10 and $12, and brokers have indicated most of the buying has been on a U.S. account.

EARLY CRITIC

An early critic of the move is Professor Melville Watkins, author of a Canadian government report on foreign investment in Canada.

Watkins described the offer as another stab at Canada's economic independence and stressed it added weight to his recommendation that Canada should pass stronger laws to handle cases where the control of Canadian companies is involved.

Offshore Project Stopped

The need for an immediate answer as to who owns what on the continental shelf off the B.C. coast lost most of its urgency Monday when Shell Canada announced its offshore drilling program had come to an end.

Sedco, the Victoria-built drilling rig, completed 14 drill holes at various points off the Vancouver Island west coast and in the Hecate Strait.

David Smith, Shell's manager of offshore exploration and production, says the efforts have not been encouraging, and the plugging of Shell Anglo Murrelet L-15 at 9,580 feet marks the end of the program so far as Shell is concerned.—H.Y.

Ahearne, NHL Prove Targets In Sports Task Force Report

OTTAWA (UPI)—International ice hockey federation president Bunny Ahearne should go, according to the report of a three-man government task force on sport tabled in the House of Commons Monday.

Health minister John Munro described the glossy, 111-page report commissioned last August as "provocative" and "excellent" as he presented it to parliament. He promised the government's "very serious consideration."

THEY DID IT

The force was headed by businessman W. Harold Rea and included 1967 and 1968 world skiing cup winner Nancy Greene — now married to Canadian ski team coach Al Raine — and Dr. Paul W. Desruisseaux, a sport medicine specialist from Quebec City.

Ahearne was described as a "shrewd, garrulous and controversial gentleman," in the report. It was suggested he was not a good choice for the IIHF presidency because there was iittle hockey played in Britian.

MADE IT CLEAR

Ahearne was "an Irishman resident in London," the report noted, adding that "it is odd that so much leadership direction rests in a man who has no real base beneath him in his own country in terms of players and leagues."'

Canada was losing international hockey tournaments because "the rules of eligibility" set by Ahearne and "the nature and application of the international playing rules works against her," the report charged.

It said European countries—"Particularly the Russians"—were not weakened by the skimming off of the very best players to play in professional leagues, as occures in Canada.

The report urged the government to press for an "open" competition in international tournaments and to insist on the removal of "artificial barriers" to the participation of Canada's professional hockey players.

Another controversial suggestion was that the government should legislate, "if necessary," against a section in the National Hockey League's standard player contract whereby the league president becomes the sole arbiter between the player and the owner on salaries.

The report called for a "clarification" of the current contract so that an owner could not fine a player for "indifferent play."

NO STUDENTS

The report also suggested the NHL should not be allowed to draft a player if he is seeking a recognized degree in university.

Another suggestion was that the NHL disaffiliate itself from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, especially in meeting the administrative costs of the amateur organization.

On wider issues, the report said too many Canadians looked down on sports, the government has failed to take an adequate role in the field and not enough money is being spent on its development.

Among the recommendations was one urging the federal government to undertake a publicity program to break down apathy and the "condecension" with which certain groups — including schools and universities — regard sports activities.

ON THE LINE

The federal government itself "must shed (its) diffidence about the involvement of government in sport and, instead, unhesitatingly and openly back it," the report said.

"Sport is too important, both objectively as a bringer of national benefits, and subjectively, in the minds of the Canadian people, to be smuggled into government politics as merely another phase of physical fitness — valuable though fitness programs are."

RECOMMENDATIONS

Among the major recommendations were these:

● A non-profit corporation, to be called "Sport Canada" should be established "to provide a focus for the administration support and growth of sport in Canada." It was suggested the government initiate a "study in depth"—including the organization of sport in other countries — before setting up the Canadian corporation.

● New definitions of "professional" and "amateur" should be devised for the purposes of federal legislation. The task force recommended that only an athlete who "persues sport as his prime source of livelihood" should be considered a professional.

● The organization of Canada's national hockey team should be revamped and the country should press for an "open" international competition in which Canada's top players — even professional players on leave — would be permitted to play. The report agreed with the federal government's creation last February of the organization "Hockey Canada" — to manage and finance the national hockey teams.

● Discussions should be initiated between the federal, provincial and municipal governments to make a greater use of existing sports facilities, including those on armed forces bases.

● Grants should be provided to employ professional coaches in a broad variety of sports and a national "pool" of coaches should be established.

Sweden Set to Pass Ban On Professional Boxing

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The government proposed a bill Monday to ban professional boxing in Sweden and predicted the measure would win approval.

Under the bill, amateur boxing would be allowed if certain safety measures were implemented to protect the fighters.

Minister of justice Herman Kling sent the proposed bill to the Law Council, where it will be checked before it goes to legislators for a decision later this year.

Kling said professional boxing should be outlawed as a health hazard and amateurs allowed to continue only under stiffer regulations.

Swedish amateur boxers have been using headguards in recent years. They would be forced to undergo stricter medical control and wait longer between fights.

Kling said the government might reconsider its decision to let amateur boxing continue if the new safety regulations were not followed or if the regulations did not "eliminate the health risks."

Gibson Takes Charge To Gain Fourth Win

Right-hander Bob Gibson, who led St. Louis Cardinals into the World Series last year, took over Monday night to get the National League champions at least temporarily righted.

He hit three singles, drove in two runs, stole a base, pitched a strong seven-hitter and tied a major league record in a 6-2 win over Los Angeles Dodgers.

Gibson, who also drew a base on balls, tied the record when he struck out the side on nine pitches in the seventh inning.

Ferguson Jenkins struck out 10, allowed only five hits and drove in the first run with a single as he registered his fifth victory in seven decisions.

Only two games were played in the American League, and the one in Seattle produced enough action for a full schedule before Pilots managed their 8-4 decision over New York Yankees.

Most of it was packed into the first three innings, and featured a free-for-all touched off when New Yorker Bobby Murcer spilled shortstop Ray Oyler hard trying to stretch a third-inning single into a double.

Oyler and Murcer came up swinging, and were soon surrounded by all kinds of supporters as both benches emptied.

When peace was finally restored, the main - bout combatants were thrown out of the game along with Yankee-manager Ralph Houk, who pushed umpire Russ Goetz during the course of a post-fight argument.

But it didn't end there. Yankee relief-pitcher Fred Talbot drew a warning in the bottom of the third inning after decking Seattle-pitcher Marty Pattin with a high pitch. And another donnybrook was barely averted in the fourth inning after Frank Fernandez barrelled into Seattle-catcher Gerry McNertney.

Albion, which plays Victoria O'Keefes of the Pacific Coast League at Royal Athletic Park on Wednesday at 8 p.m., was in control throughout most of the match, giving goalkeeper Peter Greco from Columbus Carlings a strong test.

Both goals came in the first half when referee Frank Lee called Columbus' centre-half Gino Vazzoler twice for handling the ball to the annoyance of most of the 6,825 fans.

Court Action Instituted Against Off-Track Shops

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ascot Jockey Club and B.C. Turf and Country Club Monday started a B.C. Supreme Court action against William Wosk and R. T. Enterprises Ltd. in an attempt to prevent use of overnight racing entries in off-track betting shops.

The clubs, which operate Exhibition Park here, seek damages for alleged infringement of their copyright and an accounting of any profits that may have been produced by the alleged infringement.

William Wosk, a Chilliwack scrap dealer, set up four shops here and in New Westminster last week to take bets. He charges 50 cents a bet and claims his public messenger service is "not a bookmaker's outlet."

Beaman Wins Texas Open After Unexpected Chance

SAN ANTONIO (UPI)—Deane Beaman, getting into a sudden-death playoff when Jack McGowan missed an 18-inch putt on the 18th green, dropped a 20-foot putt on the first playoff hole Sunday to win the $100,000 Texan Open—his first PGA tour title.

Beaman, a former national amateur winner, tied the course record with a six-under-par 65 on the second of Sunday's two rounds, but still appeared to be a shot short of victory.

McGowan, winless in four and one-half years on the tournament trail, needed only a par on the final hole to climax two fine final rounds with a victory. He put his approach shot on the 18th hole to the right of the green, but chipped to within 18 inches.

McGowan stubbed his putt and ran the ball by to the left of the cup.

He made his par on the par-four 15th, the first hole in the sudden death affair, but Beaman calmly rammed his putt home to grab the $20,000 first prize.

They had finished the regulation 72 holes at 10-under-par 274, three strokes in front of Tommy Aaron, Dave Hill and late-charging Lee Trevino.

Another stroke back, at six-under-par 278, came Bob Charles and first-round leader Steve Reid.

The field was forced to play two rounds Sunday because of a rainout of Thursday's opening round, and Beaman made the most of it.

NEW YORK (AP) — Who won the war?

That's the big question left unanswered by the participants who worked out the final terms of the armistice between the American and National Football Leagues.

Under those terms, Baltimore Colts, Cleveland Browns and Pittsburgh Steelers have shifted from the 16-team NFL to the 10-team AFL, forming two 13-team conferences to begin play in 1970 under the National Football League banner.

Those terms became the last pieces of the merger jigsaw puzzle to fall into place since the document ending the war between the two leagues was announced June 8, 1966.

In that document the two leagues agreed to call an end to the battle that had started in 1960 with the formation of the AFL and had come to the point where a costly contract fight over players threatened the sport's very existence.

The signatories agreed that the AFL would play under the NFL banner beginning in 1970; that the NFL commissioner, Pete Rozelle, would be the commissioner of both leagues, and that $18,000,000 plus the purchase price of the next AFL franchise would be turned over to the NFL.

FIRST TO NFL

It was labelled an NFL victory.

The AFL wound up owing $26,000,000—the Cincinnati franchise went for a price in the $8,000,000 neighborhood—for entry into the NFL club.

In return, the AFL was promised realignment.

The terms of realignment, however, were neither spelled out nor worked out for the simple reason that there was no time. That was left for the future. The future became he present Saturday night.

EDGE TO AFL

What did the AFL get?

They got the Colts, the NFL's champions, one of the premier attractions in all of pro football, and a 60,238-seat ball park that has been filled to capacity for 37 consecutive playing dates.

They got the Browns, the other entry in the NFL title game, and a 79,282-seat ball park that last year gave Cleveland the largest home attendance in all of pro football — 528,000.

They got the Steelers, admittedly one of the lesser attractions, but a team that has a long pro football history and a new 53,000-seat stadium in its future.

In addition, the AFL got two of the sport's super stars—quarterback Johnny Unitas of the Colts and running back Leroy Kelly of the Browns.

At present prices, the Colts and Browns would be worth at least $20,000,000 each—Philadelphia recently was purchased for $16,000,000—and the Steelers in the $15,000,000 neighborhood. Add to that the $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 the NFL will pay each NFL club to shift to the AFL. And the entire total is more than $60,000,000.

Compare that the the $26,000,000 the AFL paid. But don't forget that it's all the NFL now.

Who did win that war?

Swift says...

Here's how

Some people think that to be a gourmet you have to like to cook and serve very complicated dishes. That isn't true at all! You just need a taste for the finest . . . like the finest meats, prepared by Swift . . . and a little flair in the serving.

Lazy Maple Corn Bake

Open 1 lb. Swift's Lazy Maple Bacon, and partly cook half the bacon slices in a fry pan. Remove. Add the rest of the bacon cut into 1 inch pieces and fry with ¼ cup each chopped onions, green pepper and celery, until all are cooked (don't let the vegetables get mushy). Remove from fry pan and combine with one 12 oz. can kernel corn, one 14 oz. can cream-style corn, ½ cup cracker crumbs, ¾ cup milk. Pour into buttered 1½ qt. casserole. Bake at 375°F. for 15 min. Top with bacon slices and cook 10 min. longer. Serves 4-6.

We've used Swift's Lazy Maple Bacon because it adds a special taste to any dish. The secret is its deep maple sugar cure!

Swift's Cold Meat Treat

Just put out a platter of Swift's Premium Cold Sliced Meats and stand back while the crowd digs in! We've included Cold Sliced Ham (and some Swiss cheese for those favourite sandwiches), Bologna, Luncheon Loaf, Salami and Macaroni & Cheese Loaf . . . some olive and onion garnishes, and a few wedges of melon for eye and taste appeal.

Swift's Premium Cold Sliced Meats come in 33 varieties—the choice is yours. They're all prepared according to old-fashioned country recipes. What makes them modern is the way they're sliced and sealed in a flash to make sure they're fresh—always—at your store!

Apricot Glazed Prem Loaf

Mash ½ cup apricot jam with 3 tbsp. brown sugar and 2 tbsp. fruit juice. Score two 12 oz. loaves Swift's Premium Prem as for ham and spike with cloves. Spoon glaze over loaves and bake 45 min., basting with glaze frequently, at 325°F.

Prem lends itself to the gourmet touch in so many ways. And it's always so handy, in its bright red can. Even better, it tastes great because it's made with pork and the added touch of real lean beef . . . plus blend of spices.

Swift's, Swift's Premium and Prem are registered trade marks of Swift Canadian Co., Limited.

Seek Recreation Divorce

TRAIL, B.C. (CP) — The British Columbia recreation association has asked that the provincial government to establish a separate department of recreation.

UNANIMOUS

About 200 delegates in the final day of the association's annual meeting in Trail gave unanimous approval to proposals to split the existing Department of Recreation and Conservation into two parts, with conservation taking on the added responsibility of pollution control.

The resolutions, prepared by Professor R. F. Osborne, director of physical education at the University of British Columbia, also called for the transfer of the community programs branch from education to recreation.

The association had criticized the existing situation of five government departments handling various aspects of recreation, calling it "recreation pollution."

Another resolution called for more joint use of school and community facilities for recreation. The British Columbia school trustees association will be asked to help sponsor a meeting to discuss it.

The conference also called for a physical education program in elementary schools and a badge award system to encourage participation in sports.

Elected to three-year terms on the board of directors were Mrs. Myrtle Saxon of Uchulet, Elmo Wolfe of Argenta and Matt Briggs of Prince George. Elected to a one-year term was Mrs. Doreen Lawson of Burnaby.

Penny May of Victoria picked up seconds to Wendy Taylor of Abbotsford in the 100-metre hurdles and Peggy Bush of Vancouver in the 200-metre hurdles.

Tax Report Chief Dies at 62

TORONTO (CP) — Kenneth LeMesurier Carter, whose recommendations on Canada's tax structure two years ago touched off sharp controversy, died Sunday at 62.

Mr. Carter, chairman of the royal commission which compiled the report, died of cancer in Toronto General Hospital. He had been ill for about the last two years.

The report, released Feb. 24, 1967, was immediately identified with his name and most of the criticism by businessmen across Canada was directed at him.

It called for major tax reforms, including drastic cuts in some income taxes in the upper brackets and lower rates generally for medium-income and low-income groups.

But the new rates would be based on a wider field of income, including capital gains and gifts.

The report, which would take 10 years to implement, recommended that all business, large and small, be taxed at a flat rate of half their incomes after expenses.

A quiet man, Mr. Carter openly paid little attention to the protests even when the attacks reached such a pitch that he and the commission were accused of intellectual dishonesty.

Because of his strong sense of social justice, Mr. Carter believed that the first priority in taxation reform should be equity in taxation.

Mr. Carter believed in the principle of equal treatment for all taxpayers and that special privileges for the mining and petroleum companies and for the life insurance industry should be discontinued.

Completely uninterested in politics, Mr. Carter was picked for that reason as commission chairman Aug. 27, 1962, by John Diefenbaker, then Progressive Conservative prime minister. Mr. Carter had previously served on a Liberal government committee studying sales and excise taxes.

Mr. Carter knew that the report would touch off political controversy as well, but made it clear that he was not concerned with political implications.

The job he was given involved nine months of hearings. The commission received 346 submissions, heard 2,500,000 words of argument and issued the report which contains 2,600 pages at a cost of $3,500,000.

Although the report was attacked in Canada, it received much praise in other countries.

Said Joseph A. Pechman, director of ecenomic studies at the Brookings Institution in Washington, D.C.: "This report is a notable contribution to the theory and practice of tax policy in developed countries."

Born in Montreal, Mr. Carter, graduated from McGill University in 1925 with a commerce degree. He became a chartered accountant three years later and moved to Toronto in 1935 as a partner in an accounting firm.

He is survived by his wife, a son and a daughter.

At various times he was president of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Ontario. He was also chairman of the Canadian Tax Foundation and the Canadian Welfare Council.

Some Backing Away From German Mark

LONDON (AP) — Some of the big money men backed away from the West German mark Monday, retreating into the United States dollar but apparently avoiding an immediate return to the British pound and French franc.

During the weekend, central bankers of the U.S., Canada, Japan and Western Europe met in Switzerland and announced they would put into operation a plan for recycling the foreign currency flows. This in effect would mean shovelling the money out of West Germany, in the forms of loans, back to the countries of origin.

HEAVY PRESSURE

The dollar, pound and franc have come under heavy pressure in the last two weeks with money speculators and investors gambling on an upward revaluation of the West German mark. Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger rejected revaluation Friday and this started the switch back to the dollar Monday.

The name of the international money game now is wait and see whether the West Germans can make their decision stick, with new internal spending measures and perhaps government banking controls to be discussed by the Bonn cabinet this week.

West Germany disclosed that $600,000,000 worth of foreign currency poured out of the country Monday.

But this was only about 15 per cent of the $4,000,000,000 that a government spokesman said West Germany had unwillingly taken in since Charles de Gaulle's April 28 resignation as French president shook the money markets.

HOT FUNDS

This outflow represented the hottest of the "hot money" chasing a quick profit. But most of it remained on deposit in West Germany — in case the Germans prove unable to resist world pressures to revalue.

This, if it happened, probably would not come until after the West German elections in September, because revaluation would cut the profits of West Germany's exporting farmers and businessmen.

And the hot money did not go back to where it came from — British, French or other national reserves. It went into dollar deposits on this side of the Atlantic, called Eurodollars. They earn interest at an annual rate of up to 10 per cent and represent a good holding position for banks or companies with liquid cash.

The signs of the cash flow were read in the markets. The mark was in less demand and therefore went back to its old rate of 25 cents U.S., down a half-cent from Friday's free market price.

Crisis Possible, Kiesinger Told

BONN (AP) — Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger was warned by his Social Democrat coalition partners Sunday that Friday's decision against upward revaluation of the mark could lead to a new economic crisis in West Germany.

Hans-Juergen Wischnewski, general secretary of Foreign Minister Willy Brandt's Social Democratic party, defended Friday's demand by Economics Minister Karl Schiller, a Social Democrat, for a 6.5-per-cent upward shift in the mark's parity.

Launching the Social Democrat attack on Kiesinger's majority Christian Democrats, Wischnewski said on radio: "For the experts, it was a dubuious decision which will confront us with many difficulties. The economics minister had good reasons. Inflationary developments abroad endanger the stability of our mark."

MORE EXPORT

Blasting at Christian Democrat Finance Minister Franz Josef Strauss, a leading opponent of revaluation, Wischnewski declared: "Strauss was first to speak of revaluation, and then he blocked it. Strauss has spoken in favor of direct investments abroad. But he permits that the mark remain undervalued. He is an impassioned campaigner for price stability, but he does not spare us importation of price increases from abroad."

Firmly rejecting rumors that Schiller is considering resigning, he added: "Professor Schiller will not permit this."

The economics minister will fight to preserve the stability of West Germany's economy, he declared.

Atlantic Record Set

LONDON (UPI) — Two Royal Navy pilots in a Phantom jet set a new transatlantic speed record Sunday, streaking across the ocean from New York in four hours and 46 minutes.

Lieut. Cmdr. Brian Davies piloted the plane to Wisley, just south of London. His copilot was Lieut. Cmdr. Peter Goddard, who went on by helicopter to London's post office tower to finish the race as required by the Daily Mail, sponsors of the contest.

Total time from the start at the Empire State Building in New York to the post office tower was five hours and 11 minutes.

The old record, set last week by Royal Navy Lieut. Hugh Drake, was four hours 53 minutes flight time across the ocean for a total of five hours and 19 minutes including the Empire State Building-London post office tower stops.

Royal Air Force Squadron Leader Lecky Thompson captured the London to New York run with a time of six hours and 11 minutes. His $12,000 prize will go to charity, as will the $2,400 won by Davies and Goddard.

As Davies' and Goddard's Phantom landed, Mira Slovak, a pilot from California, was urging his 400-pound glider to Kent, England.

Slovak took off the Sunday before from Peterboro, N.J., in his glider which is powered only by a converted small car engine. He had been airborne since except for several rest and refueling stops.

Prince Michael of Kent, a cousin of Queen Elizabeth II and a captain in the Royal Hussars, tried to boost the British army's standing in the race but a traffic delay at Kennedy International Airport held his time to seven hours, 45 minutes.

Mrs. Kelly took the women's lead in the $2,400 competition but Kelly's time for a prize of the same value was beaten an hour after his arrival in London by Mike Fallon of Rickmanswater, England, with a 21-hour, 31-minute flight.

Two Americans, Susan Scribner of Garden City, N.Y., and Richard Selph of Sandy Hook, Conn., led for $9,600 in prizes in the subsonic competition.

Non-Winner Wins

Air Race Prize For Canadian

LONDON (Reuters) — Vancouver pilot Neil Stevens has been award a $5,200 prize in the great Transatlantic Air Race after checking in at London's General Post Office Tower only two hours before the race ended.

Stevens, 25, the only Canadian entry, got the prize for the most meritorious non-winning entry with a time of 108 hours 14 minutes 38.67 seconds on the New York-to-London crossing.

He had intended to make the flight in a vintage Tiger Moth, but had to abandon the plane in Moncton, N.B., because of mechanical trouble.

When he reached Prestwick Airport in Scotland he changed to a borrowed Tiger Moth and took off for London.

He made the final dash to the Post Office Tower on Sunday night in a vintage car.

He was accompanied by Vancouver photographer Harry McPhee, who carried the original Tiger Moth across Canada in a truck. McPhee was not entered in the race.

Finland Bid Explored

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Monday Canada "is very interested" in Finland's initiative to arrange a multi-nation conference to discuss new security arrangements to replace NATO and the Warsaw pact.

Sharp told Andrew Brewin (NDP — Toronto Greenwood) in the Commons that Finland's ambassador had been advised of the Canadian position.

The ambassador also had been told that Canada would "carefully and sincerely" explore the suggestion.

Sharp said Finland's ambassador sounded out Canada some days ago about the conference. It had not issued an invitation, but was rather sounding out Canada, the U.S. and other countries on the idea.

Outside the House, Sharp told reporters that if such a conference turned out to be a propaganda exercise, the cause of East-West understanding would be set back for years.

He said it is not yet clear whether Canada and the U.S. would be invited to such a conference, billed as a European security conference by the Warsaw pact powers which have been promoting the idea for years.

Universities Warned To Calm Tensions

HALIFAX (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield warned Monday that current student unrest may lead to "a further falling-off of public interest and investment in higher education."

Stanfield, speaking to 277 graduates at St. Mary's University here, said he was afraid the situation may not improve unless the universities themselves take steps to resolve the tensions within them "in a positive and satisfactory way."

★ ★ ★

The Progressive Conservative leader, who had been Nova Scotia's education minister while the province's premier, said Canada had never fully acknowledged the fundamental importance of its universities.

Not enough young Canadians were attending universities, he said, and too high a proportion of university students were from upper and middle-class families.

Stanfield said national governments have given education too low a priority. "There are constitutional difficulties . . . but they are difficulties which can be overcome.

"Various national Canadian governments, and the people who elect them, have failed sufficiently to recognize that an investment in education is an investment in economic growth and cultural vitality. It is not a luxury, but a priority of major and urgent importance."

Stanfield also said there is a sense that "time is running out and patience running low" in the pressures between French- and English-speaking Canadians.

"I believe we face today a growing frustration with Canada among French-speaking Canadians, and a growing frustration with Quebec among English-speaking Canadians."

Airlines Accused Of Strike Breaking

MONTREAL (CP)—Mike Rygus, Canadian vice-president of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, Monday accused two other airlines of strike-breaking in the Air Canada dispute.

Rygus, speaking at a news conference, said members of the union are resentful at being asked to handle routes ordinarily handled by Air Canada.

He specifically mentioned CP Air and Quebecair. The union represents about 1,000 CP Air employees and another 250 in Quebecair.

"Since Air Canada went out on strike, the ATC (air transport committee of the Canadian transport commission) has authorized other carriers to fly the routes normaly handled by Air Canada," Mr. Rygus said.

"To our members and the union, this is strikebreaking."

He said the CP Air and Quebecair ground workers are being asked to work excessive overtime and are becoming "fed up" with the situation.

The Association represents 6,300 Air Canada ground workers who went on strike shortly before midnight April 20 to back up demands for higher wages.

The strike has grounded Air Canada's 108-plane fleet and has affected more than 11,500 employees across the country.

Mike Pitchford, the union's chief negotiator, told the news conference that the difference between Air Canada and the union as far as money is concerned is $2,000,000 "and it's been that way for the last two weeks."

LOSING MORE

He said the company is losing more than this every two days by not agreeing to a settlement of the contract struggle.

Pitchford said contrary to reports, the union "gave up on the parity objective three weeks ago."

Air Canada said in a statement Saturday that the union "continues to demand wage increases related to the recent airline settlement in the United States."

Talks were suspended late Friday night after both sides agreed earlier that face-to-face negotiations had reached an impasse and that some form of mediation would be necessary.

Meanwhile, the Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association has asked Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey to set up an industrial inquiry commission to rule on a complaint by Air Canada pilots.

Cleve Kidd, executive vice-president and chief negotiator of the association, said in a telegram to the association that Air Canada has violated "the provisions of the industrial relations and disputes investigation act in placing on 'off-duty status without pay' all unionized employees, including pilots."

Backers Of Strike Dismissed

PENTICTON (CP)—An undisclosed number of workers were fired Monday from Brenda Mines, following a partial breakdown of a sympathy strike.

Dismissed from the company were a number of production workers who supported a strike by members of the Plumbers and Pipefitters Union.

However, enough production men, members of the Tunnel and Rock Workers Union and the International Union of Operating Engineers, crossed picket lines to permit partial operations at the mine, 30 miles west of here.

Stehr Takes Inlet

An angler who defied all the experts of Saanich Inlet won the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association membership derby Sunday. Ove Stehr used a Flashtail fly, only 45 pulls of line and "one more for luck," and six ounces of weight off McCurdy Point, to hook into his top prize-winning 17.12-pound spring salmon.

Frank Jenvey's 14.1-pounder from Coles Bay took second prize.

Wilf Bridge was third with an 11.12-pounder; Mrs. B. Hollick fourth with a 7.2-pounder; Mrs. Wyn Rusk fifth with a 5.12-pounder; Sid Sidaway sixth with a 5.1-pounder; Kathy Williams seventh with a 3.12-pounder and D. Newton eighth with a 3.1-pounder.

Aloha Couple

Off on King Fisherman prize holiday in Hawaii and the outer islands are Bill and Eileen Stephenson, pictured here, as Canadian Pacific Air Lines hostess Shirley Joe places leis around their necks. Mr. Stephenson won CPA all-expense-paid trip for two with a 6.12-pound spring (chinook) from Pedder Bay. This year's grand hidden weight prize trip for two will be by CPA to Fiji.

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — A bill that would reduce the penalties for possession of marijuana was passed by the Washington state legislature.

MONTREAL (CP) — Preliminary hearings for 86 adults charged in connection with the Feb. 11 destruction of a computer at Sir George Williams University have been postponed until May 20 in 32 of the cases and June 2 for the rest.

Pacific Rim Nearing 'New Era'

By IAN STREET

British Columbia has shown the way in promotion of Pacific Rim trade and now may be about to make its mark on the economy of Western Australia, Premier Bennett said Monday.

Following a luncheon meeting with Premier David Brand of the state of Western Australia, Mr. Bennett told reporters the visitor had shown "great interest" in the province's debt-free status.

"He (Mr. Brand) is just amazed that British Columbia should be in this good a financial position," Mr. Bennett said. "He is, of course, minister of finance as well as premier. I think that a premier should always be finance minister, because you can't have programs unless they can be financed."

MORE IMPORTANCE

Mr. Bennett said the visit of the Australian state premier shows that countries on the Pacific Rim are giving more importance than ever before to Pacific trade.

"This province provided the lead some years ago when six cabinet ministers visited Japan and started the great trade that exists today between Japan and British Columbia and Canada.

"It took the federal government a few years to discover this fact. Only recently External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp and a couple of other ministers were in Tokyo. But that's what you can expect from a government 3,000 miles away."

BOTH RICH

Earlier, the Australian premier said in an interview there are great similarities between B.C. and his state—both are rich in natural resources and require foreign capital to spur development.

"Our state is growing at twice the rate of the rest of the commonwealth (of Australia), just as your province is growing at about twice the average rate in Canada," Mr. Brand said.

Turner Hints

Languages Bill Possible Court Subject

By MARJORIE NICHOLS

OTTAWA—Justice Minister John Turner indicated Monday that the Trudeau government had not ruled out the possibility the constitutionality if its official Languages Bill would be challenged, despite efforts to make the bill more palatable to critics.

In the House, he rejected a request to have the opinions of the government's lawyers on the bill's constitutionality made public before debate opens on second reading.

The request was made by former prime minister John Diefenbaker. Mr. Turner felt the legal opinions would be privileged if the bill was challenged in court.

BEST EFFORTS

"I am sure (Mr. Diefenbaker) will appreciate if, despite our best efforts, there is a challenge made constitutionally to this bill, that any opinions we have received will be privileged," he said.

He added that if the legal opinions were made public prior to any court action it might "prejudice the case of the government of Canada."

Replying to other questions from Mr. Diefenbaker, Mr. Turner indicated opinions from legal experts outside the government had also been sought.

OTHER QUARTERS

He said on the basis of advice from the law officers of the crown, which had been "unofficially supported in other quarters," the government was content that the Language Bill was "within the competence of Parliament to enact."

Mr. Turner also reiterated the federal government had no intention of initiating a reference to the Supreme Court on the question of constitutionality.

IN COURT

His admission that the government may yet have to defend its controversial bill in the Supreme Court comes in the wake of reports that cabinet approval has been given to amendments to the bill aimed at appeasing the Western provinces.

Several premiers and attorney-generals from Western provinces told the federal government at the last federal-provincial conference in Ottawa they had serious reservations about the constitutionality of certain sections of the bill.

Drinks Draw Reprimand

"Did you drink before you came to this court today?" Magistrate William Ostler asked Hector Adamson before sentencing him Monday to one month in jail for wilful damage.

"I've had a couple," replied Adamson, 59, of no fixed address.

"You have a nerve, drinking before appearing in court; you could be held in contempt of court," Magistrate Ostler told him.

Adamson was charged with breaking down a door in the Eastern Hotel on April 29.

The court was told that Adamson had shown up at hotel at about 6:30 p.m. that day and demanded entry to room 34. When the occupant told him that he wasn't welcome, Adamson proceeded to break down the door with his elbow.

After the door burst open, Adamson went away, the court was told. Damage to the door was estimated at $35.

Murder Trial

Wound Details Heard in Court

The trial of a 66-year-old Victoria man charged with the non-capital murder of his wife continues at 10:30 a.m. today in Supreme Court, following a day of mostly technical evidence from police and doctors.

William Clifford, of 1001 North Park, charged with shooting his 63-year-old wife Edna last March 15, is being defended by Foster Isherwood.

The jury also heard some testimony from Leonard Norman Ward of Victoria, who described Mr. Clifford as "a very good friend of mine." Shortly after his entry to the witness box, Mr. Justice Thomas Dohm sent the nine-man, three-woman jury from the courtroom, while a point of law was discussed.

AN AUTOPSY

Dr. George Hamilton Anderson told the court an autopsy performed on the body of Mrs. Clifford showed she had died from a rifle wound that severly damaged abdominal organs and severed the aorta.

There were powder burns around the bullet entry wound, suggesting the shot was fired from close range, Dr. Anderson said. The time between the shooting and death was "a matter of seconds, or at the very most, a minute or two," he said.

TRADE PAYMENT

A .303-calibre rifle entered as an exhibit in court was identified by Mr. Ward as once being his property. Mr. Ward said he gave Clifford the rifle some time ago as trade payment for a partly unpaid rent debt.

Mr. Ward said he lived at 1010 Balmoral Road from October, 1965, to March, 1966. He was a tenant at this residence, owned at the time by the Cliffords.

CROWN MEN

Crown prosecutor in the case is Walter Anderson, assisted by David R. Wilson. The trial is expected to continue all this week.

Edna Clifford died soon after 5 a.m. March 15. She was found face down on the floor at 1001 North Park with a bullet wound in her chest.

B.F.Goodrich launches the Radial Wide.

It's built wide and low for North American cars.

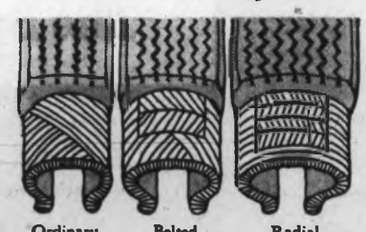

New Radial GT Wide's put 41% more tread on the road. They're the safest and longest lasting tire made in Canada.

The B.F.Goodrich Radial GT Wide has more life in it. It stops, handles and corners like no other tire. The Radial GT Wide is the safest tire made in Canada. And it's the first radial made wide and low specifically for North American cars. It's the only thing to take your life for a ride on.

A new kind of construction:

The Radial is the ultimate stage of tire development. It obsoletes ordinary tires... and goes a giant step beyond the new "belted" tires. The Radial GT Wide runs circles around other tires because that's the way it's built. Instead of criss-cross cords, Radial cords run parallel to each other and a rigid belt of cords circle the tire like a hoop. Result:

Ordinary cord pattern. Belted tire pattern. Radial cord pattern.

6 plies under the tread, less heat build up, less distortion and more stability. New ideas in rubber are, of course, nothing new to B.F.Goodrich—we invented the tubeless tire

Up to double your usual mileage:

Compared to standard equipment tires, the Radial can give you 10,000, 20,000 even 30,000 extra miles. Heat developed by high speed driving is a tire's greatest enemy. Because the Radial generates far less heat than old fashioned designs, it takes a lot longer to wear out. Its tread is 26% deeper than ordinary tires. It can cut tire operating costs in half. What's more, B.F.Goodrich guarantees it for life against defects and road hazards.

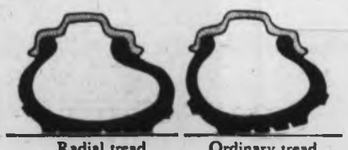

After 20,000 miles. Ordinary tire is bald. Radial has plenty of tread.

This is going to stop you:

The Radial GT Wide can shorten braking distances dramatically. Because you get up to 41% more tread on the road — plus a tread that can't distort or squeeze out of shape — you stop shorter and safer.

The Radial GT Wide will show what it's made of the first corner you take. The tread stays put. There are no stiff sidewalls to lift the rubber off the road. On wet and slippery corners, the tire sticks with you. On dry roads, you'll find out why people buy sports cars.

Your life isn't all they can save:

The Radial GT Wide has an unexpected bonus. You might not expect a tire of this quality and performance to have a frugal side . . . yet it does. The Radial rolls easier and has less drag. You can save up to 10% on gas consumption and give your engine a little softer life.

The Radial GT Wide is now available in sizes to suit most domestic cars. And, there's our European made GT-100 with a unique tread design to suit imported cars. You can try the GT Wide today on a special 10-day free trial, at participating dealers. Drive into your B.F.Goodrich dealer's listed below. You won't drive the same car out.

Things Great But Bad: Von Thadden

STUTTGART (LAT)—The Germans have never had it so good, the far-right National Democratic Party admitted Sunday as it wound up its national election congress here.

"Yet the so-called economic wonder remains our only reason to be proud," the party said in an appeal it hopes will reach at least five per cent of the voters next September. As for the rest, it couldn't be worse.

Law and order have disintegrated, as has the sanctity of the German family. Red students occupy the universities. The army is undermined by war resisters. Instead of art, shabby pornography is offered.

And so on. To make it worse, a complacent public with full bellies is not prepared to stand up for the state and a better order.

This was the essence of two days of raucous oratory in the Killesberg hall here, as Germany's newest right-wing movement geared up for the campaign it hopes will take it to national power.

Party chief Adolf Von Thadden told a press conference he expects the NPD will get between eight and 12 per cent of the national vote and 50 seats in the Bundestag.

★ ★ ★

This is one more than currecently held by the Free Democratic Party, the sole opposition to the "grand coalition" of Socialists and Christian Democrats which governs the country.

In political terms, Von Thadden explained the significance of his expected victory:

It will keep the Christian Democrats from attaining an absolute majority in parliament and instituting reforms leading to a two-party system.

Von Thadden said the NPD will give Germany its first real opposition party—a party that is unabashedly conservative but claims it is no neo - Nazi. Whatever the truth, the reading habits of its readers were illuminated by the books on sale inside the congress hall:

Books purporting to tell the truth about Hitler, war books by Otto Skorzeny portraying the old wehrmacht in a complimentary and romantic light, Emmy Goering's opus on her late husband and one called Youth Rebellion which carries an introduction by Barry Goldwater.

The appeal of the congress smacked of the past. "Despite all," it said, "we can be proud of our people and nation and its centuries of history."

Added Von Thadden: "We believe that national honor and freedom are not old-fashioned words. In order to become one people again, we must mobilize our spiritual strength."

Thus the West German military must take as its first mission the defence of the homeland — not as Von Thadden put it, "the defence of Atlantic documents and UN resolutions."

About 1,000 delegates and guests applauded wildly at each ringing denunciation of the status quo and every veiled hint om anti-Americanism.

Davis Blasts B.C. Pollution

Mill-Closures Threatened

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis Saturday warned his department will force the closure of two B.C. pulp mills if they do not stop polluting water.

In an address to the annual convention of the B.C. Wildlife Federation, Mr. Davis said the federal government has the power to tighten regulations in pollution control.

He said regulating powers of several departments, including fisheries, will soon be clarified under a new water act.

Mr. Davis would not identify the mills he said were guilty of persistent water pollution, which is detected by fish long before it becomes a public health problem.

Closure is the quickest method of waking up some businessmen, he said and a closure action by the federal government would not conflict with existing provincial regulations.

Speaking on the proposed water act, Mr. Davis said the expected legislation will give Ottawa power to co-ordinate development of Canada's major river systems.

Speaking to the annual convention of the Canadian section of the American Water Works Association Monday, he said divided jurisdiction over waterways has been a potential obstacle to development of a comprehensive water-management program.

He said the new bill, called the Canada Water Act, will aim at development programs based on entire watersheds. It will be introduced before June 30.

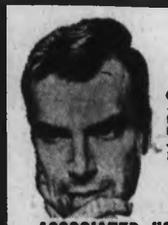

Mr. Davis said Canada has all the pure water it needs, but has a problem in processing and distributing it. He said the new bill would provide for a multi-purpose water resources development program, which includes such areas as pollution control.

Housing Attack

NDP Picks Ex-Liberal

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

James Gorst, who less than a year ago was president of the Esquimalt Liberal party association won nomination Monday night to stand as the NDP candidate in the same riding at the next B.C. election.

The 45-year-old taxi operator won on the second ballot, 32-29, eliminating the Esquimalt NDP association president, Leonard Stephenson, and a teacher, Albert Canning.

Mr. Gorst quit as president of the Esquimalt Liberal Association last June, after his nomination for Esquimalt-Saanich candidacy in the June 25 federal election was disallowed by the Liberal party's B.C. headquarters. He had won the nomination by acclamation but it was ruled by the party his chairing the meeting was unconstitutional.

Mr. Gorst and the local Liberal executive quit their posts, but did not at the time quit the party. At the time he said: "True Liberals have been pushed aside by people who pose as Liberals."

Mr. Gorst told the nominating meeting he is free to campaign "full-time" for the NDP in the next election in B.C.

Questions Anticipated

Anticipating possible questions about his change of party, the former Liberal said Walter Gordon, former federal finance minister of the Pearson cabinet told him it would be the NDP party which eventually tackled the problem of economic domination of Canada.

"He told me that if he was 25 years younger he would join the NDP," Mr. Gorst said. "And since I was 25 years younger than him, I joined the New Democratic Party."

About 75 party members turned out for the nomination meeting. Guest speaker MLA David Barrett called the turnout "terrific," and said "we had to scratch for a candidate last time." Mr. Barrett, who was defeated by 36 votes in his attempt for the NDP provincial leadership a month ago, said the heavy turnout has "been duplicated all over the province ... because they (NDP) know we're going to form the next government of B.C."

Mr. Barrett ridiculed a B.C. promotion film, The Good Life, as being full of "canned laughter and phoney scenery — something out of North Hollywood."

Commenting on reports that Premier Bennett had some of his personal appearances in the film cut out because of adverse publicity, Mr. Barrett said, "If he wants to win an academy award, he'd better cut out all of them."

High-Paying Positions

The MLA said the people who enjoy the "good life" in B.C. are mostly defeated Socred candidates who get high-paying civil service appointments.

In his speech, Mr. Gorst said he had personally called on 100 out of 160 possible delegates.

Differing with his former Liberal chief, Prime Minister Trudeau, Mr. Gorst said a housing "crisis" does exist in Canada and blamed both provincial Socred government and the national Liberals. When interest on mortgages is more than 10 per cent and houses cost more than $25,000, "then I think we have a crisis in housing," Mr. Gorst said.

He also attacked the Socred government for the "farce that is being played out on hospitals" and the "fiasco of the Pat Bay highway."

The first vote ended with 20 votes for Mr. Canning, 16 for Mr. Stephenson and 26 for Mr. Gorst. On the second ballot, one woman announced her abstention and the vote was 32-29 for Mr. Gorst.

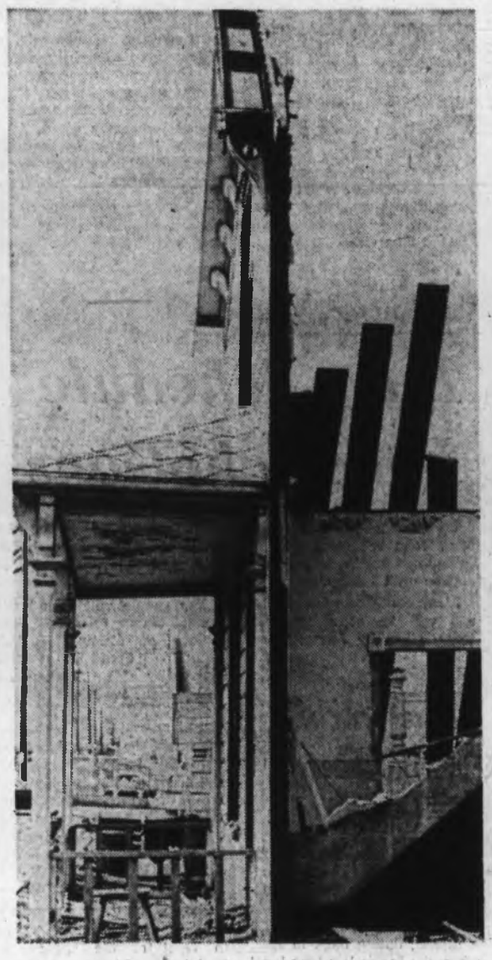

Mr. Gorst is a part owner of Blue Bird Cabs Ltd. The riding of Esquimalt is held by Social Crediter Herbert Bruch.

Lily Wilson Plans Retirement

By PAT MURPHY

Former alderman Geoffrey Edgelow will probably run for mayor in December and senior alderman Lily Wilson will retire, according to statements they made Monday.

When Mrs. Wilson retires after 14 consecutive years of service, she and Mr. Edgelow will be deadlocked for length of tenure on the municipal body. Their record terms are equalled only by that of Edward Williams, who retired from council in 1949, also with 14 consecutive years.

Ald. Edgelow was defeated at the polls in the aldermanic election of Dec. 10, 1967. He was edged out by 31 votes by Ald. Clyde Savage.

Edgelow

Wilson

The defeat was the outstanding feature of the 1967 election and came as a surprise as Ald. Edgelow had a record of leading or being near the top in previous electoral battles.

Mr. Edgelow is the second candidate to enter the mayoralty lists for the 1970-71 term of office.

Early this month Ald. Robert Baird, who is due for re-election this year, said that he would be a candidate.

Mayor Hugh Stephon, who has always said he would be content with two terms of office, reaffirmed his position recently and said he would not run again at the completion of his present term.

In announcing his candidature, Ald. Baird, who was second from the top of the list at the polls in 1967, said a principal plank in his platform would be opposition to the CPR proposal for a city-built $2,400,000 convention centre adjacent to and tied in with the Empress Hotel.

Asked his opinion Monday on the convention centre issue, Mr. Edgelow said he was definitely in favor of a centre for the city, but felt that the CPR proposal was a matter for the ratepayers to decide when the matter was submitted in a referendum scheduled for June 28.

NO CONFIRMATION

There were rumors at City Hall that an effort was being made to postpone the referendum from June until the latter part of August, although no confirmation of the move could be obtained.

Mr. Edgelow took a strong stand on the matter of a sea disposal of Victoria's sewage.

He said he was content to abide by the opinion of some of the foremost North American experts, who maintained that the action of sea water, combined with the currents offshore from Clover Point, rendered sewage harmless.

ALTERNATIVE

"The alternative, it would seem, would be a sewage treatment plant at Clover Point, and this is an outrageous idea," Mr. Edgelow said.

"It would be a desecration of Beacon Hill Park and a waste of a large amount of money. All that is needed is an extension of the outfall at the point and this is included in the over-all sewage plan," the former alderman said.

Mr. Edgelow, who has been chairman of every city council committee over the years, said he had a few tag ends to clear up before definitely announcing himself as a candidate but he did not doubt he would be on the roster on election day.

ENJOYED YEARS

Ald. Wilson said she had enjoyed her 14 years on city council but the post was ever more demanding of time and energy.

She said she also felt that when senior aldermen had a fair term of office, they should retire and make more room at the bottom for younger people.

Final Tax Rate

Central Saanich Up 2.74

Central Saanich taxpayers will pay a 2.74-mill tax increase this year despite three intensive budget-paring sessions by their municipal council.

At a special meeting Monday afternoon, council struck a general mill rate of 19.75. Combined with 29.75 mills for schools, .48 mill for debt, and .21 mill for hospitals, it brings the total to 50.19 mills.

MILL COUNT

Central Saanich Mayor Archibald Galbraith said the mill in his municipality was currently worth about $11,000.

Last year's total mill rate was 47.45. This was made up of 16.91 for general purposes, .58 for debt, and 29.98 for schools.

The mayor said the municipality had budgeted more than $100,000 for public works this year, most of it to be spent on roads.

Adult Study Institute Transformation

District College Vote Likely in June

By BILL STAVDAL

Public support for a district college will likely be sought in a no-money plebiscite before the end of June, Greater Victoria school trustees and officials indicated Monday.

A plebiscite would be the first solid step toward transformation of the Institute of Adult Studies to two-year college status, a move tentatively planned for September, 1970.

Trustees, meeting as the school board's education committee, were told by district superintendent Joseph Chell that a brief to the department of education was "very well received." Department officials requested a seven-year enrolment projection which is being prepared, Mr. Chell added.

The Institute of Adult Studies is located on the Lansdowne campus of the former Victoria college. It offers high school matriculation, senior matriculation and special education.

It now enrols 401 students in Grade 12 courses plus 168 taking senior matriculation. Students have complained that the senior matriculation courses are unsuited to continuing education at university.

The district's brief to the department says:

"Students are seeking courses more in line with subsequent university work. It is evident to us that the presently prescribed Grade 13 courses do not fit this need."

DISTRICT COLLEGE

Students also have asked a second year of post-secondary studies, the brief notes.

The school district has been approached by the B.C. Institute of Technology and an unspecified school of nursing to offer "some of the preparatory academic work."

Trustees have opted for a district college which would be governed by the Greater Victoria school board, rather than a regional college which has numerous school boards plus government appointees running it.

No detailed cost estimates have been announced yet. However, as a district college the school would receive 60 per cent of capital and operating costs from the government, compared with only 50 per cent of operating costs under its present administration.

The plebiscite being considered by the board would amount to an expression of opinion by all eligible voters, including tenant-electors. Any referendum for funds would be put later to owner-electors only.

Army Hopes Buoyant After Early Returns

The Salvation Army's Red Shield campaign had by late Monday collected $20,133 of the $79,700 target set for this year's drive.

The Army said less than 5 per cent of the collection districts had been canvassed so far. Officials said that, judging by the rate the donations were being received, the fund was bound to go well over the top.

Contract Vote Friday

Second Bus Line Strike May Threaten Island

By DON COLLINS

Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland face the threat of a second major bus strike, the Colonist was told Monday night.

It would sever the only remaining bus link between the mainland and Island. The Fraser Valley would also be hard hit.

The question of whether a strike will develop is up to the 160 drivers of Pacific Stage Lines in Vancouver, who will vote Friday night on a contract offer.

Bus service via B.C. Ferries was cut in half Thursday night when more than 100 Victoria-based Vancouver Island Coach Lines drivers went on strike for a new contract.

The Vancouver line, which shared ferry bus service with Vancouver Island Coach Lines, has not atempted to pick up any of the business of its competitor.

"This means half the ferries are travelling without buses unless they happen to be carrying charters," said Joseph Simpson, president of the CBRT and GW's Local 234.

The local covers 13 bargaining units in addition to the striking drivers.

He said the Vancouver drivers considered the routes normally handled by the striking Victoria drivers "hot" and would refuse to have anything to do with them.

Meanwhile, some commuters have found the trip between Victoria and Vancouver especially expensive since the strike began.

They have been using taxi service to catch ferries not served by Pacific Stage Lines. This has cost them approximately $7 at Vancouver and $5 at Victoria in addition to the ferry fare, they say.

Since the Vancouver Island Coach Lines terminal is being picketed, the Vancouver line is using Avis-Rent-a-Car, 800 Douglas, as a Victoria terminal.

Two Injured In Accident

Two people are in good condition in St. Joseph's Hospital following an accident on Goldstream Road early Sunday.

Albert James Vanallstein, 23, of 497 Island Highway, and David Martin, 21, of North Vancouver, suffered leg injuries, cuts and bruises when their convertible struck a utility pole and turned over.

Police said the car was a total loss.

School Libraries:

Solution Creates Another Problem

Problem: not enough books in school libraries.

Solution: put more books in school libraries.

And THAT solution to that problem is apt to be costly, Greater Victoria curriculum supervisor Denis Brown told school trustees Monday.

Mr. Brown was reviewing progress in upgrading the district's school libraries, which have been substandard for years.

All 14 high schools have central libraries, said Mr. Brown. Of 39 elementary schools 10 have libraries and another nine will get libraries this year.

A further nine will be added next year, he said.

It is expected that "at least" 12 of the 14 high schools will come up to an average of 10 books per pupil this year, he added. (Ten books per pupil is a current rule of thumb for school libraries.)

But, said Mr. Brown, he's "very concerned" about library space. The district's current program to catch up has resulted in more books and more shelves being placed in libraries which are already inadequate in size, he said.

The answer is to either build new libraries, take over classroom space or decentralize school libraries, he suggested.

Happy Birthday Queen Victoria

Greater Victoria school board and the IODE will sponsor a joint celebration at 10:45 a.m. Friday in honor of the anniversary of Queen Victoria's birth 150 years ago. Lieutenant-Governor Nicholson will speak at the gathering at the Parliament Buildings.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: Our teenage son had to go to hospital last week for a minor operation. They put Yule in a semi-private room for $50 a day. His roommate was a man about 70 who looked dead. He had cardiac failure and his breathing was so labored you could hear it in the hall.

Yule is a nervous boy to begin with and being in the same room with that man upset him terribly. When my husband asked the doctor if he could please find another room for Yule he said we were lucky to get any kind of a room — that the hospital was jammed.

Two days after Jule's surgery, his roommate died. Yule fainted when they wheeled the man out. This incident slowed up his recovery by at least a week.

Please tell me if there is somebody we can sue. Also, what do you think of a hospital that would do a thing like this?—Irate Mother.

Hospitals Crowded

Dear I: Sue anybody you like but you won't collect. Most hospitals are extremely crowded. They do the best they can. Granted it was unfortunate that your son had to be roomed with the old man, but I'm sure they didn't have a better place to put him.

□

Dear Ann Landers: When I had my first baby I was frightened to death, not of childbirth, but of taking care of him. I was afraid to hold him, afraid to feed him, and afraid to bathe him.

I had nightmares of my baby choking on milk. I dreamed that I accidentally drowned him in the bathinette. When he cried at night, I was paralyzed with fear. I was sure he was seriously ill.

One day a neighbor who sensed my anxiety explained how each of us needs something outside ourselves to believe in. She said we must place our trust and faith in a higher being. I've never been a religious person, Ann, but that wise woman unlocked the door to peace of mind for me when she uttered these simple words — "If you worry, you don't trust. If you trust, you don't worry."

Phrase Gave Help

Her one phrase changed my life. Please print it. Perhaps it will help some other young mother as it helped me. — F.D.

Dear F.D.: How beautiful! And how true! Her words are worth repeating — "If you worry, you don't trust. If you trust, you don't worry." Thank you.

Dear Ann Landers: You'll never know the good you do. When you printed the address of Gamblers Anonymous I'm sure you helped thousands.

And now, I wonder if you know about Gam-Anon. This organization helps wives and husbands of compulsive gamblers. We at Gam-Anon are learning to live with a person who has the illness. Anyone who wishes information should write to Gam-Anon, P.O. Box M. Norwalk, California 90650. — Grateful Member.

Dear Member: Here's your letter and I urge those who are having problems because of gambling to gamble once more — on the price of a postage stamp.

ERMA BOMBECK Misses Ironing Board

Minor Change Upsets Everyone

Dolly Drought invited the gang over to her house for a sherry hour the other day to celebrate, Fight The Filthy Fly Month.

I love Dolly. Her approach to housecleaning is the same as mine: slowly.

"What did you do to your living room?" asked Myra.

We all stopped and looked.

"Did you send some furniture out to be covered?" asked Pat.

"Something's missing," said Jan.

"I took my ironing board down," said Dolly quietly.

"Dolly! You're moving!" I shouted.

"No," she shrugged. "I just took it down."

"You're not going to tell us you finished your ironing," said Myra. "You got diapers in the bottom of that basket and Army shirts on top and they both belong to the same kid!"

★ ★ ★

"No. It's just that I've had it up for 18 years and just wondered what this room would look like without it."

We looked around. "Is that chair new?"

"Where do you want us to put our purses and sweaters now that the ironing board is down?"

There's room in the closet," said Dolly.

Where do you want me to put the jelly glasses and the cups with no handles for the sherry now that the board is down."

"There's room on the coffee table," said Dolly.

"Cheers," we all said in unison.

"What did Dick say when you took the ironing board down?" said Myra.

"I didn't get a chance to tell him," sighed Dolly. "He tripped over a hole in the carpet the ironing board covered and sprained his ankle."

"And the kids?"

"They always stored their school books on the board and when it was gone they had to look all over the house and missed their school bus."

"But you thought it was a good idea."

"I don't know," she said. "I always used to iron whenever I talked on the phone and watched soap operas. This morning with nothing to do I started to smoke again. All I wanted," she began to sob, "was to be like the women in the magazines."

"Can't you see where cleanliness and orderliness will lead you?" asked Pat. "Next, you'll wash the coffee pot after each use. Then you'll start to put sugar in the sugar bowl. And you'll defrost your meat before five o'clock. Then no one will be able to stand you. You'll lose all your friends. People will call you Mrs. Olsen behind your back."

Dolly marched to the utility room and came back with the ironing board. It was up faster than we could say, "See you next month when we celebrate National Test Your Battery Week."

Mussolini's Widow Wins Fight

ROME (UPI)—The national court of accounts ruled Monday that dictator Benito Mussolini's widow Rachele, 78, is entitled to a pension of $227.20 a month, dating back to 1961, when she began her long legal fight for the money.

The government had contended that Mrs. Mussolini was entitled to no pension at all because she waited more than 10 years after her husband's death at the hands of partisans to file a claim. The court ruled this does not apply to pension cases. Mrs. Mussolini owns a restaurant in her native Romagna in northern Italy.

A Lovelier You

By MARY SUE MILLER

Spot weight seems to find especially congenial housing under the waist-line, high on the side hips. All uninvited, weight congregates in balloon-shaped pads and puts up a fight against dispossession.

If you're a victim of these pests, you can give them the heave-ho. But it takes will power and this eviction routine:

● Lie back down on floor with arms extended to sides at shoulder level and legs straight up in air. Keeping legs together, slowly swing them six inches to right and then to left. Repeat ten times without stopping; relax and repeat again.

Throughout, concentrate on rolling weight evenly and smoothly across high-hip pads. Also, keep shoulders and arms flat on floor. Action is in hips and waist.

While awaiting improvement, be fussy about wearing anything that binds your waistline. A tight girdle or belt would only accentuate the difficulty. It goes without saying that you would not wear a bathing suit cut out so as to bare the pads in residence.

Two Survive Ordeal in Well

MELBOURNE (AP) — A 23-year-old Australian mother was rescued from a 15-foot well Sunday after holding her baby son for eight hours to save him from drowning.

Vickie Olney, mother of 15-month-old Adam, said: "It was ridiculous. I kept thinking these things happen to other people, not to me.

"I picked up Adam from the water after he fell in and then when I found I couldn't climb out of the well, I wondered what the television heroes would have done.

"So I tried to knock footsteps in the brick wall of the well, planning to make enough to allow me to climb to the top with the baby.

"But do you know? The bricks crumbled every time. I tried for hours but couldn't get a footing."

Mrs. Olney, a farmer's wife at Budgeree, 111 miles southeast of Melbourne, and the boy were rescued when her mother arrived, heard cries from the well and summoned aid.

Stylist Likes Boutiques

By DIANE JANOWSKI

A young English shoe and clothing designer had only words of praise for young Vancouver boutique-owners when she visited Victoria recently.

"Many of these young people are actually selling their own products instead of mass-produced items," said Miss Christian Dewer-Durie.

"Most of these things are at least as good as, if not better than the factory items," she added.

The 23-year-old designer, currently on a Winston Churchill travelling fellowship, is studying Canadian and American fashions during a three-month tour which will take her through almost every major American city.

Miss Dewer-Durie was in Vancouver last week and came to Victoria to visit with her roommate's aunt, Mrs. J. C. Cox of 2680 Macdonald Drive.

A designer for H. and M. Rayne Ltd. of London, the firm that makes shoes for the Queen, Miss Dewer-Durie is also a freelance designer for women's clothing and will be opening her own shop in the fall.

Her shop, to be called The Rocking Horse, will deal in children's clothing and toys.

With 1½ months remaining of her tour, the designer will now go into the western and southern United States.

★ ★ ★

The Air Canada strike has not upset her plans as she had wanted to travel by train during the latter part of her Canadian tour.

She has, however, noticed the Vancouver Island Coach Lines strike.

"But it's just a slight inconveience," she said. "When you're spending three months travelling, you just learn to accept every problem as it comes."

Colored Man, White Wife

Couple Free in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, (UPI) — A regional magistrate Monday acquitted British-born Mrs. Barbara Jacquesson and her husband Joseph of charges of violating South Africa's Immorality Act.

Jacquesson, 25, is of Lebanese and Indian descent and qualifies as colored in South Africa. The law makes sexual intercourse between people of different races a criminal offence.

Earlier this year, Jacquesson and his 24-year-old wife had pleaded innocent before a South African court to a charge of having unlawful carnal intercourse, contravening the 1968 racial law.

Magistrate Jabez Van Wyk said the couple was of different races — Jacquesson admitted the state claim that he was colored — and the Immorality Act stipulates that marriage between persons of different race is an offence even if it takes place outside South Africa.

But in this case, the magistrate said, it was proved Jacquesson had abandoned his South African citizenship before his marriage in England in 1966 and furthermore the 1968 act was not retrospective. In addition, Jacquesson came to South Africa to wind up his father's business and his wife joined him on the spur of the moment.

Following his acquittal Jacquesson told reporters: "Now that everything is over, we shall settle our affairs as soon as possible and return to England."

King Size?

LONDON (UPI) — The British construction industry unveiled a poster of a bathing beauty whose measurements were 914-610-914 — in millimeters. It was part of a drive to get Britons to "think metric" before the nation converts to the metric system in 1971.

Tanker Here For Overhaul

The Montpelier Victory, a 736-foot American oil tanker, arrived in Esquimalt Saturday night from Los Angeles for an annual overhaul.

The 49,000-ton ship will stay at Esquimalt Graving Dock for a week before going on to Drift River, Alaska. The Montpelier Victory is owned by Victory Carriers Inc. of New York, and is currently on charter to the Union Oil Company.

Comedy Taken Seriously

ROME (AP) — A Rome magistrate threw out a police chief's charge Monday that Gina Lollobrigida broke the law by referring to police as "cretins" in her latest film.

In the film Buona Sera, Mrs. Campbell, Gina speaks about "cretins of policemen" after a comedy sequence that ends in a car pileup.

Genoa police commissioner Vincenzo Fontana was not amused by the scene or the remark and filed the charge Sunday after seeing the film.

The magistrate dismissed Fontana's charge because he said the picture was a comedy and the police in the film made stupid manoeuvres in the chase.

Band Displays Finesse In McPherson Show

By BERT BINNY

It was on stage at the McPherson Playhouse Sunday afternoon, and its performance reflected great credit both on the band members and on conductor H. G. Cuthbert.

The opening march was played with vigor and confidence.

NEW RHAPSODY

A new Welsh Rhapsody was delightful; there was a control and finesse in the presentation of several lovely Welsh airs. Highlights from Musical Man were also good, and all that was wrong with Overture International lay in the title: it was almost all American.

The trombones in Slippery Gentleman, the trumpets in Trumpet Tango and the flutes in Carnival for Flutes all had their moments.

And a Dixieland item, with a small combo backed by the whole band, was something to hear, expecially that red-hot trombone.

ONE MEMBER

One member of the combo, justly referred to as "our hero" by master of ceremonies Don Kerley, was Ron Dunston.

The band visited Banff at the end of April. In the course of a walk along the tempestuous Kicking Horse River, one young lady member of the band fell into the water and was immediately swept under the famous natural bridge.

And it was Ron who jumped 20 feet into the swirling water from rocks and pulled the young lady out, damp and without her shoes, but otherwise unhurt.

BIG HAND

He was applauded loudly on Sunday afternoon by the large audience.

The band also performed at Golden following a night on the train. There wasn't much sleeping done.

"I went to sleep at 3 a.m.," said Mr. Kerley, "and slept right through until 4:30!

"But there's the secret! Keep the band up all night and they'll produce a great performance the next day."

Trip expenses were all raised by the band members, and band president David Winters received a presentation from all of them Sunday afternoon in recognition of his efforts through a series of fund-raising enterprises.

The Dunsmuir junior high school band also performed Sunday afternoon. It has only been in existence for two years but has come a long way. It was particularly acceptable in A Little Bach Suite, All Through the Night and the Obernkirchen Choir's The Happy Wanderer.

OTHER CHOIRS

Metchosin and Happy Valley elementary school choirs, conducted, respectively, by Mrs. Dora Blake and Mrs. Phyllis Kennedy, also contributed to the program.

It's Victoria high's turn next Sunday. The band will be at the McPherson with curtain time at 2:30 p.m.

Lilies Cooled

Judging by my mail, there seems to be considerable confusion among local gardeners as to the correct time of the year to plant lily bulbs.

It is easy enough to understand that you plant gladiolus bulbs in the spring, for this is the only time you see them in the stores and garden centres. By the same token, the only time tulip bulbs are offered for sale is in the fall. But lily bulbs are featured during the spring months, again in the fall, and one kind even in midsummer. So what is the rule here?

Jan de Graaf of Oregon, probably the world's leading commercial grower of lily bulbs, once said that the proper time to plant a lily bulb was 15 minutes after it had been dug up. The point he was trying to make is that lily bulbs are different from those of glads or tulips in that they are not hard, dry, dormant corms but loose, scaly bulbs, plump and full of moisture — the kind of bulb that starts deteriorating slowly from the moment it is taken out of the ground.

For many years, because of this, the only practicable time to plant lilies was in the fall, and this had many disadvantages, both from the standpoint of the home gardener and the commercial grower. On the lily farms, the bulbs cannot be dug and shipped to market until the tops die down naturally, and in a late season, by the time the bulbs had passed through the channels of trade and had reached the stores and garden centres, winter was upon us. Nowadays, the problem is solved by digging the bulbs in the fall when they go dormant and storing them under refrigeration and with closely controlled moisture conditions, and are offered for sale in the spring, when the public's gardening fever is running its highest temperature. Most garden shops are geared to do their peak business in the spring, for it is a well known fact that the urge to plant things is much stronger in spring than at any other time of the year.

This spring, unless I miss my guess, there are more lily bulbs being planted than at any other time in our history, for folks are finding out that it is possible nowadays to grow the most exotic kinds as easily as glads and dahlias — easier, in fact, for you don't have to take up and store lily bulbs through the winter.

There has been something of a population explosion in lily varieties lately, with newer, tougher, hardier and more glamorous kinds being introduced every year, and a surprising number of these new lilies are born and bred right here in Canada. This break-through came about as a result of some inspired plant breeding in which some of the wild lilies of the world — too disease-ridden to be propagated commercially — were crossed with the durable old Lilium henryi, a native of the cold and windswept plains of North China.

The offspring from this mixed marriage were mostly duds, as is usually the case, but from the few good ones came a whole new race of fantastically beautiful flowers — the Aurelian Hybrids. A further improvement came by crossing the Aurelians back with their daddy — incest is condoned and even encouraged in the breeding of plants — thereby injecting a double dose of the tough Manchurian blood into the race.

Other similar crosses were made, giving us new forms, new flower shapes, new colors, and above all, superior vigor, disease resistance and hardiness. Some of these newcomers will be described in a later column.

ART BUCHWALD

Enemy Wins Barney

The Students for a Democratic Society have urged their members to get their hair out, shave off their beards and sideburns and infiltrate the business community this summer. The idea is to foment revolution off the campus.

Some businessmen are fearful of the results of such an infiltration. But I think the SDS is taking a bigger chance than business.

It's one thing to stick to your ideals on a campus with 50 or 60 other students giving you support, but it's another to go off all alone into the business world and keep from being corrupted.

Bearing in mind that most members of SDS are usually the brighter students, let us go to the Flipper department store where Barney Longstreet, an SDS leader, has managed to get a job as a trainee in the men's clothing department.

For a start, Barney has been sticking pictures of Che Guevera in the suits hanging on the racks—a small thing, but as Mao Tse tung says, "A revolutionary must work in the pockets of most resistance."

Barney does this early in the morning. Since he is always the first one there, the men's clothing buyer is very impressed with him and one day announces that he is elevating Barney from his trainee position to full salesman.

This surprise appointment leaves Barney unsettled, as he wants to pursue the life of the lowliest employee to get the feel of what it is like to be exploited by the capitalist system. Rather than reveal his true identity, Barney accepts the promotion.

His chances of fomenting revolution amongst the employees are limited to lunch and smoking breaks and when Barney tells the employees what a lousy deal they have at Flipper's, he attracts a large audience.

The vice-president of personnel, who has no idea what Barney is talking to the other employees about, feels that if he can attract such large audiences he must have executive potential and therefore he makes him a floor manager at a healthy salary increase.

Stricken with fear that he is selling out, Barney hands in a list of reforms which he says the store must agree to before he takes the job. These include Flipper's department store getting involved in the community, donating part of its profits to the employees and setting up an Afro-American clothing boutique.

These demands are sent up to the president of Flipper's, and after reading them he says, "Why didn't we think of this first? I don't want Longstreet working as floor manager. He's too valuable to waste there. Bring him up to the executive offices."

Barney is now in real trouble because, thanks to his demands, profits of Flipper's are up 30 per cent, and he is made a vice-president in charge of promotion.

He is so busy thinking up new ideas that he has little time for fomenting revolution.

In keeping with his position, he has a new department, a new car and he spends his evenings in bars meeting airline stewardesses. The only revolutionary activity he has time for is reading Marcuse at his weekend cottage.

Once, in a moment of extreme guilt, Barney sits down on the floor in the president's office to show his disdain for the system. But when the president and other executives come in, they all join him on the floor and they hold a meeting on how to increase the store's charge accounts.

The president finds everyone so much more relaxed when they sit on the floor that he orders all the furniture taken out of his office.

★ ★ ★

At the end of the summer Barney is offered his own store, which Flipper's opens specially; and since he's too ashamed to go back to his SDS chapter and tell them he's executive vice-president of Flipper's, he accepts. And so the Students for a Democratic Society lose another good man.

Dunaway Dallies

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — Faye Dunaway is in London, and in no hurry to resume her film career. Marcello Mastroianni is in London completing his third British movie. The two facts are related. Faye's next film is Little Big Man, but the starting date is vaguely some time in the fall. She broke her engagement to photographer-director Jerry Schatzberg last year, while co-starring with the fascinating Marcello. As of now, Faye is still planning to make a film for Jerry — it was to have been a co-production for the engaged couple. The title of the movie, Puzzle of A Downfall Child, has nothing to do with the situation. The Italian star is married and has no plans for a divorce.

★ ★ ★

One of the longest engagements is apparently ending at the altar sometime near the end of this month — Natalie Wood and Richard Gregson. They have returned to Hollywood from Switzerland, where Natalie was a happy onlooker while Richard, a former agent, produced his first movie, The Downhill Racer (not to be confused with the Downfall Child) with Robert Redford whose movie with Paul Newman, Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, should put him in the top drawer of movie stars. Redford has been almost making it for a decade, but a series of mediocre movies held him back.

★ ★ ★

There is no talk of a new film for Elizabeth Taylor, who had originally planned to star in Two Mules for Sister Sara, with Clint Eastwood, but Richard talked her out of it. It was lucky that Vanessa Redgrave did not accept the role of the nun when Sister Sara was offered her, what with her being so pregnant at this time. I read somewhere that Vanessa was planning to marry the father of the expected child, Franco Nero. I'm not betting on it, though. They have gone this long without the ceremony — both are free to marry — if they were going to make things legal, wouldn't they have done so by now?

SYDNEY HARRIS

Problems Misnamed

It can hardly be a verbal accident that most of our major "problems" are called by exactly their opposite names.

We have the so-called "youth" problem — which is not a problem of youth at all, but a problem of older age: they are asking us to become, and quickly, more rational, more flexible, and more humane. For there is little youth can do about the world until we change.

★ ★ ★

The same is largely true of the "Negro" problem — which, as every open-minded person knows, is a "white" problem. All it takes to solve it is a 45-degree turn in the attitude of most white people. If that could happen, 90 per cent of racial conflict would disappear overnight.

★ ★ ★

The "poverty" problem falls in the same category. It is not a problem of the poor, for most of them did not willingly put themselves there and cannot do much about their plight. It is a problem of the more affluent finding room in society for the less fortunate who are virtually powerless to help themselves.

Then we have the universal "war" problem, which is really a "peace" problem. As Hannah Arendt said recently, large-scale war has now become inconceivable, because it can no longer effect political change.

But nations have not found — because they have not looked for — any genuine substitute for force in international affairs, and so the concept (and the threat) of war persists in the world, hanging over us like a cloud that can deluge the entire globe, rendering "victors" and "victims" equally devastated.

We call diseases by their symptoms. Youth rebellion is a symptom of adult apathy. Black militancy is a symptom of white bigotry. Poverty is a symptom of maldistribution of income and opportunities. War is a symptom of power-driven anarchy among nations.

And many people merely want to suppress the symptoms, falsely imagining that thereby they are getting rid of the disease, when they are only making it worse.

Confucius said that the good state must begin with the right use of words — because if we call things by the wrong word, then we are blinded by our verbal delusions and cannot take realistic steps to correct the evils in society. Justice must end in deeds, but it must start with the proper use of words.

And even the word "problem" is not the right one to describe the troubles in each of these areas — they are "deficiencies," like the deficiency diseases, and must be nourished by loving concern, or any systematic "solution" is bound to fail.

PEOPLE AND PROGRAMS: The U.S. networks have started to announce the first-run movies they will be showing in prime evening time next season. Some of the titles are Georgy Girl, Spy Who Came In from the Cold, A Man and a Woman, Magnificent Men in Their Flying Machines, Our Man Flint, Flight of the Phoenix, Night of the Generals, Lord Jim, Two for the Road, Flim Flam Man and Raquel Welch's One Million B.C.

Speaking of movies, a U.S. company plans a new Julius Caesar, with John Gielgud in the title role, Charlton Heston as Marc Antony and Richard Johnson as Cassius . . . Carol Burnett fans are warned that her show will switch to CTV from CBC next season . . . Tony Franciosa has returned to the cast of Name of the Game after missing two shows in a script dispute.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Saturday's sociable answer — Way back in TV, Beaver was played by Jerry Mather and his brother Wally by Tony Dow. Even wayer back, December Bride's regulars were Spring Byington, Verna Felton, Frances Raffety, Dean Miller and Harry Morgan. Of which raspy old Verna was by far the best.

Today's question wanders wackily into the world of comedy. F'rinstance, give the one-word laugh line of Jack Benny, which is easy. Not as easily, come up with Flip Wilson's Queen Isabella line and Bob Newhart's rickety chartered airline. Answers Wednesday.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

Let's say that you've Big-Clubbed your way into three no trump in this deal. To land this contract you will need to win three tricks in spades and you cannot do this unless you handle the spade combination with absolute precision.

Vul: Both

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	All pass

Opening lead: Club king

Let's say you duck West's opening lead of the club king and win the next round as East shows out. Realizing that you have to try to develop three tricks in spades, while at the same time keeping West out of the lead, you may think it is a good idea to cross to the heart queen and lead a low spade.

However, if East is astute enough to unblock with the jack, you will be dead. You can win the queen and continue by laying down the ace, but East will keep up the good work by dropping the king. Since you won't be able to develop the long spade without letting West in, you will be defeated.

To make this contract against best defence, the declarer has to realize at the outset that he needs to find East with specifically the K-J-x of spades. Moreover, it is essential to lay down the spade ace and then cross to dummy and lead towards the spade queen.

If South performs this unusual manoeuvre, there is nothing the defence can do. Even if East unblocks with the king when the ace is played, he can be forced to win the second round or third round of spades with the jack. Either way, West never gets the lead.

Indians Eye Town Status

Several Indian bands have shown renewed interest recently in a proposal to give them a self-contained municipal status, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Monday.

The minister said he has scheduled a meeting with the Cape Mudge Indian band on Quadra Island for June to discuss the question of a pilot municipal project.

But he added: "Interest is picking up everywhere and we have had inquiries from several other bands."

Mr. Campbell was commenting on results of meeting which he attended Sunday with federal Health Minister John Munro and six Indian leaders. Among those present were South Vancouver Tribal Federation head Chief Philip Paul.

Mr. Munro appeared to be persuaded that there is a need for holding of the biggest government conference on Indian afairs ever held in Canada, Mr. Campbell said. This is something B.C. has been seeking for some time.

He said: "I think every government department at both the federal and provincial levels that has anything to do with Indians should be included in such a conference. In British Columbia's case, that would include the department's of social welfare, health, education and labor.'

Cowichan Opponents Withdraw

Trustee Acclaimed to Vacancy

DUNCAN — Marina owner at Maple Bay, Kurt Horn, 38, was acclaimed as new Cowichan school board trustee when nominations for one seat on the board closed Friday.

Mr. Horn will complete the term of former trustee Alastair MacDonald who resigned earlier this year. The term ends in December.

Mr. Horn's two opponents David Roy Haywood, 27 of Quamichan Heights subdivision and Fred Zantvoort, 33, of Maple Bay, withdrew their nominations to run for a second vacancy on the board which occurred two weeks ago when Jack Efford resigned.

Mr. Haywood and Mr. Zantvoort are expected to submit their new nomination papers soon. The election will be held next month. Mr. Horn and a second trustee to be elected then will represent North Cowichan.

Term for the second seat will expire in December 1970. Mr. Haywood is employment supervisor at the Crofton pulp mill. Mr. Zantvoort is a stock broker.

Commission Request Rejected

Council Retains Control of Park

NANAIMO — A second request by the parks and recreation commission to have Exhibition park placed under its control was refused by city council Monday night.

Aldermen Gordon MacKay and John Hancock supported the commission's request but were unsuccessful in convincing the rest of council.

Ald. MacKay said, "If we hadn't had Bowen Park dedicated we'd have buildings strewn all over the place.

"I see no reason why in future years we should leave ourselves open to having buildings all over," he said, referring to industrial expansion along the highway and railroad strip on the east section of Exhibition park.

"Parks are for people. They are the only place where we get pleasure out of our tax money," Ald. MacKay said.

Ald. Ken Medland said that by dedicating the park, council would be restricting its ability to use the land easily for the benefit of the people.

He said in Bowen Park recently, the lease of land to the curling club had to be put to the people because of the 20-year lease. Provincial regulations demand that leases of dedicated park property for longer than five years must be voted upon by ratepayers.

Ald. Hancock said the commission was concerned over the sale and lease of property in Exhibition park both in the past and for the future.

He said the city yard was in Exhibition park and the grounds were shrinking without recreational benefit.

In other business, the advisory planning commission recommendation that the Pay-N-Save Petroleum Ltd. re-zoning request be granted was suported by council.

He said popular opinion that there was a plethora of filling stations in Nanaimo was not accurate. He said many service stations were being closed, but people were not paying attention to that and were concentrating their attention on those that were being opened.

Duncan Development

CPR Firm Plans 'Big Operation'

DUNCAN — The CPR's real estate firm Marathon plans a big development in Duncan within the next five years, Ald. Jim Saunders told city council Monday night.

He said "we don't quite know what it will be." He hinted a considerable sum of money would be involved and it would be a great asset to the city.

Ald. Saunders' remarks came after Ald. Dick Benzies noted that the city is the biggest landowner in Duncan and some of the city property should be made revenue-producing.

Ald. Benzies suggested some of the land could be sold for commercial development. He expressed concern about lack of development and lack of progress. Ald. Saunders said, "Before we do anything we should contact Marathon first. They may plan to do the very thing Ald. Benzies is suggesting."

Ald. Martin Lukaitis charged, "Something always is held up by Marathon. Who owns the city, the people or the CPR?"

The mayor explained at one time city council tried in vain to make a deal with the CPR for additional parking and in regard to a third railroad crossing.

He said, "Now we have come closer." He referred to recent successful negotiations with Marathon regarding the third railroad crossing and the relocation of the main line which will allow the city to establish additional parking.

The city is facing the spring dog problem and council proposed drastic steps if a talk with SPCA officials is not satisfactory.

Ald. Rois Harder said the last time the city made a new contract with the SPCA the city "went to the limit and the SPCA said it would back the contract."

George Davis Registers Top Clocking

PORT ALBERNI — Council Monday night passed a record $6,666,404 budget incorporating an overall tax increase of 3.4 mills.

Swinging Citizens

Sunshine Club Lightens Days

By MARY TAYLOR

It's a question you're most apt to find him asking himself during the time when the Port Alberni Sunshine Club is meeting in Echo Centre. And the club has something going on almost every day of the week.

Although most of the members are what is known as senior citizens they really are swingin'.

The big cedar room at Echo Centre was divided by its full-side 10 or 12 tables of card rooms one day recently. On one sidt 10 or 12 tables of card players were engrossed in their games. On the other side, the Sunshine Club choir under direction of Mrs. Olive Boe was trying out old songs and new, accompanied by a string group referred to as The Ukelele Band, although several guitars and a violin were providing a friendly background as well.

In the Dogwood Room, there's carpet bowling on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, but as soon as the Tuesday crib tournament has been fought to the last peg, there'll be carpet bowling on Tuesdays too.

CREATIVE SIDE

The creative side isn't forgotten.

Tuesdays, there are anywhere from seven to 10 budding artists at work. For all but one or two, it's their first attempt at putting brush to canvas but since last September, many attractive landscapes and still life compositions have been turned out by the members.

UN Posting in Africa Won by Ex-Victorian

A 24-year-old former Victorian has been appointed charge de mission of a $1,000,000 UN program in Ethiopia.

Gary Perkins, a son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Perkins of 4353 Cordova Bay Road, will assume his post when the project begins in July. He will administer the construction of five hospitals, seven schools and a community centre.

The Ethiopian government will provide him with a chauffeur and two servants. His position will also entitle him to travel on a UN passport and enjoy full diplomatic immunity.

The University of Victoria graduate is believed to be the youngest member of the UN staff ever to have received a posting of this sort.

Mr. Perkins is currently working as assistant to the UN high commissioner in Geneva. He first joined the UN in June, 1968, when he was hired to organize an international health convention.

Rezoning Validity in Doubt

Legal Pits Face Highrise Feud

By NANCY BROWN

Oak Bay's highrise rezoning feud Monday night seemed headed toward a morass of conflicting legal opinions.

Municipal solicitor D. M. Gordon had doubts the validity of the bylaw which rezoned for highrise development Victoria Riding Academy land on Cedar Hill Cross Road, council was told.

The reasons for his doubts were not aired as council once again discussed the contentious bylaw, which has been before council since the end of March.

ACTION LAUNCHED

Meanwhile, in Supreme Court, Conrad Watling, president of Oak Bay Ratepayers' Association launched an action Monday afternoon to have the bylaw quashed. No date has been set for the hearing.

The bylaw, which would allow two nine-storey buildings and eight smaller buildings on the property was adopted by council three weeks ago.

Last week Ald. Ian Horne asked Mayor Fred Hawes to exercise his prerogative and have the bylaw brought back for further discussion.

OPINION LATER

Mayor Hawes said he would discuss the question with the municipal solicitor and give an opinion later.

Monday night Ald. Horne returned to the attack asking the mayor for a decision.

Mayor Hawes said he would not exercise his prerogative unless council asked him to, and Ald. Hawes pointed out that only the mayor could make such a move.

"I favor the bylaw, and unless some member of council can suggest there is some part of the bylaw that should be amended I wouldn't be willing to exercise my right to recall it," said the mayor.

SOLICITOR'S NOTE

Ald. G. Scott Wallace said amongst the reasons for recalling the bylaw was a May 1 note from the solicitor which stated that he was not convinced of the legality of the bylaw.

"If the solicitor had been the first man instead of the last to see this bylaw perhaps it wouldn't contain so many pharses which are liable to cause us endless meetings and perhaps legal actions," he added.

Ald. Horne asked what the position of the municipality would be if it purported to sell land for apartment development knowing full well that legal advice had been given casting doubts upon the bylaw's validity.

Ald. Douglas Watts said a bylaw couldn't be substantially amended after a public hearing and further discussion was useless.

He suggested that at least a principle had been established and problems could be cleared up at a later date by an amending bylaw.

Mayor Hawes said all council members had had the opportunity to study the bylaw before final adoption, and it did establish a principle.

"If council wishes to amend the bylaw at a later date or to pass an amending bylaw I would be all for it," he said.

Ex-Coroner 'Smiled' At Kennedy News

LOS ANGELES (Reuters) — A former Los Angeles County coroner was "smiling and dancing" when he heard Senator Robert F. Kennedy was shot and said he hoped Kennedy would die and give him an international reputation, a hearing was told Monday.

Dr. Thomas Noguchi, 42, appeared before a Los Angeles County civil service commission hearing to challenge his dismissal in March from the coroner's post. He performed the autopsy on Kennedy.

Noguchi's lawyer, Godfrey Isaac, denied the allegations made against the doctor by Martin Weekes, a counsel for the commission.

Noguchi was dismissed after L.S. Hollinger, the Los Angeles County administrative office, said that the doctor took drugs and hoped for disasters so that he could become famous.

Elders Hear Youth Tell It

'Disillusioned' in Grade 1

By DON GAIN

Young people won't ask help from older people because they're afraid of them and adults are "scared stiff" of the young people. Disillusionment sometimes begins in Grade 1.

Illegality is part of the attraction of drugs and this attraction would be removed if their use was not illegal. High school students won't turn their friends in for drug-peddling.

These are some of the statements that came out of an experiment in communication arranged Monday night by Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis.

STAFF MEMBERS

His council sat down in the council chamber with 10 Saanich high school students and about 12 members of staff, including three from the police department.

The group saw the movie Flowers on a One-Way Street which depicted the confrontation between Toronto and Yorkville hippies.

Then Rev. Walter Donald, priest of Christ Church Cathedral and youth-community co-ordinator for CFAX, acting as moderator, asked for reaction on a local level.

SCHOOL SYSTEM

He asked the students what they thought of their school system.

They said classes are overcrowded; schools are underequipped and it is "fine to help other countrise" but there's a lot that needs to be done right here.

They said some teachers are too conservative and there are only a few whose classes they enjoy.

"Has it ever occurred to you to go to an elected official to tell him what you think?" Father Donald asked.

One girl student said it would just "go in one ear and out another." Another criticized her fellow student for the "negative attitude."

One student said "it's the students' own business if they want to wreck their lives."

"Do you know anybody in school who sells it?" Father Donald asked.

Most of the students indicated they were disillusioned with school and that they were speaking for their fellow students.

Indian Rebel Beats Charges

CONWALL, Ont. (CP) — Kahn Tineta Horn, former model and now a self-styled Indian crusader, Monday was acquitted of obstructing police during demonstrations at the Seaway International Bridge last Dec. 18.

After her court appearance Miss Horn, 26, said she will seek a meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau and Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien.

TO THE QUEEN

"If they won't see me to talk about the Jay Treaty, then I'll fly to England and talk to Prime Minister Harold Wilson and Queen Elizabeth," she said in a telephone interview.

The Indians, from the St. Regis reserve on Cornwall Island claim that under the Jay Treaty of 1794 they have guaranteed border-crossing rights and should not have to pay custom duties. Miss Horn said England and the United States honor the treaty.

The demonstrations last December were over the treaty and 49 Indians were arrested when they tried to block traffic on the bridge.

BROTHER FREED

Acquitted with Miss Horn was her brother Talo TeKane Horne, also charged with obstructing police.

Judge Phillip Baker of Kingston, Ont., said there was reasonable doubt that the accused obstructed police.

Miss Horn said: "The court did well by proving there can be justice to Indians."

Miss Horn elected trial by judge and jury on a charge of carrying an offensive weapon, a knife, during the demonstration. The charge will be heard early in June.

Sales Anemia Victim

Corvair Comes To End of Line

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. gave up Monday on a one-time success—the compact, rear-engined Corvair, suffering from sales anemia since industry critic Ralph Nader jumped on it in his book, Unsafe at Any Speed, in late 1965.

GM announced Monday the Corvair line will be killed off Wednesday.

The terse announcement gave no explanation other than: "It is our regular practice to review our product offerings."

In Oshawa, Ont., a GM spokesman said the Oshawa plant manufactured 1959 to 1966 models of the Corvair. After 1966, Canadian orders had to be imported from the United States.

Nader insisted in his book that the Corvair, first air-cooled, rear-engined North American make, was unstable in design and unsafe.

GM vigorously defended the Corvair as safe, and a spokesman said Monday the company never had lost finally a Corvair damage suit based upon any alleged design fault.

While some shed, other Corvair owners plastered their bumpers with "I Love My Corvair" stickers and formed Corvair-booster clubs.

Negroes Move To Close College

SEATTLE (AP) — The Black Student Union threatened Monday to close the 13,000-student Seattle Community College Thursday by "all action necessary" if certain demands are not met by Wednesday.

The college replied this was impossible and it would "take whatever steps it has to" if classes are disrupted.

A. Frank Williams, BSU chairman at the college, said his organization must receive a written guarantee by 10 a.m. Wednesday that a "full spectrum" of courses will be offered at the college's new central campus.

Meanwhile, black militants interrupted church service in Los Angeles, New Orleans and Paris Sunday to demand $500,000,000 reparations for racial injustice, while their leader had a more orderly confrontation in New York.

James Forman, spokesman for the National Black Economic Development Conference, returned to Riverside Church, where last week he took over a service to read a manifesto.

When the pastor, Rev. Ernest T. Campbell, began his sermon, Forman rose slowly from his seat in a front pew but remained silent throughout the sermon.

After the service, Mr. Campbell told Forman: "The church can be rightly charged with contributing to inequities." But they disagreed on how much and to whom the payments should go. The church had announced Saturday it would set apart an unspecified share of its income for the poor.

Students Smoke More, Not Less

After a six-month anti-smoking campaign, a survey released Monday by the Ontario Medical Association showed that high school students didn't smoke less—in fact, smoked more. There was no change in adult smoking.

The campaign in Lindsay, 20 miles west of Peterborough, Ont., ranged from "kick-the-habit" clinics for school children to a quartet of singing clergymen called The Holy Smokes.

The association conducted two surveys, with the first showing that 17 per cent of high school students interviewed smoked from half to one package of cigarettes daily. After the second survey, the figure jumped to 24 per cent.

And while no students said they smoked more than two packs daily before the campaign, 2.6 per cent said they did afterwards.

Dr. F. T. H. Porter, the association's assistant secretary, said that despite mounting evidence of the relationship between cigarette smoking and heart disease, cancer and respiratory diseases, smoking habits of the public remain unchanged.

"The only group in society which reduced cigarette consumption was the medical profession," he said.

Arrests, Property Damage

Zappening Leaves Regrets

BISMARCK, N.D. (CP) — The great zap-in, at Zap, N.D., which began as a tongue-in-cheek concept in North Dakota State University's student newspaper, ended here Sunday in an aftermath of property damage, arrests, national guard troops and regrets by both students and the townsfolk of Zap.

The tiny village of 300 drew from 2,000 to 3,000 students from most parts of the U.S. and from many points in Canada last weekend, for no other reason than the fact that the town bears the name of Zap.

About 500 national guardsmen followed the young people into the town Saturday, after the "zappening" had left the village's downtown section with not one window intact, with damaged buildings and the remains of bonfires smouldering on main street. Stores and taverns were left in a litter of their own merchandise.

Invaders included students from Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Minnesota, North Dakota, California, Florida and other points. At least one had come from Toronto, a distance of 2,760 miles.

Meanwhile, the word was going around that next year would bring a "hop to Hoople," a town of 334 about 60 miles northwest of Grand Forks.

Actors' Charges Dropped, Producers Remanded

TORONTO (CP)—Charges of staging an immoral performance were dropped Monday against 15 actors who appeared in the Toronto production of Futz early in March.

William Marshall, Arthur Pennington, and Miles O'Reilly producers of the play, and director James Garrard, all of Toronto, were remanded to June 4 for trial.

Crown counsel Ross Lundy gave no reason why the charges were dropped against the cast members.

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA (Special)—Twice Monday, Health Minister John Munro was given the chance to dispel growing uncertainties about the future of family allowances. Twice, he declined.

Instead, he seemed to firm up a little more the possibility that the baby bonus, along with other welfare, will be based increasingly on actual need. He did, however, issue what amounted to a denial of a similar cutback in the old age pension.

Munro said the government wants to make its social welfare programs "more selective" to provide more for "the startling number of Canadians living below the poverty level."

He said it was his personal opinion that, "in certain of the high income groups, the universality of the baby bonus, the payment of family allowances, is questionable."

Munro

Munro made his remarks in reply to a direct question as to whether in this affluent age, the baby bonus was losing its high priority in the federal welfare program.

He disclosed the report of a task force, which deputy welfare minister J. W. Willard headed in a year-long study of the government's social security programs now was in front of the cabinet.

DIRECT QUESTION

When the Commons opened, NDP whip Stanley Knowles of Winnipeg put the direct question to Munro: "Does the government have any intention of introducing legislation to eliminate or cut back either family allowances or old age pensions?"

Here was the first opportunity to deny it, but Munro left the question hanging.

'NO DECISION'

"There is no government decision, one way or another," he replied, which could only mean the government was considering the future of the baby bonus.

This he confirmed minutes later, outside the Commons.

'UNDER REVIEW'

It was different, he conceded, in its contributory aspects as the "substructure" to the Canada Pension Plan.

But the baby bonus, he explained, had been "under review for a year" by the Willard task force, and was only one of a number of welfare programs being looked at, some "with a view to making some changes."

If the family allowances program was one of those where "some changes" might be made, Munro was asked, then was it possible the switch in it would be from the basis of payment to all families to only those actually in need?

'PREMATURE'

It would be "premature," he replied, to say what tests, need or any other measuring stick, might be applied.

The government, recalled the welfare minister, was "studying all social security programs" with the objective of "introducing more of the element of selectivity."

The future of the baby bonus came into question late last week when Prime Minister Trudeau forecast massive cutbacks in federal spending.

Asked directly if the family allowance program might be a candidate for the economy knife, the prime minister said only, "that would be telling" — then went on to remark that the $562,500,000 the program costs annually was "a very large chunk of money."

TRIAL BALLOON

Calgary North Conservative MP Eldon Woolliams accused him of flying "a trial balloon," then asked Munro if he didn't think reduction of family allowances might be political suicide?

Who could tell "these days," what constituted political suicide? Parried Munro, and anyway there were "other useful pursuits than politics."

Tacoma Gets Curfew Until Races Calm

TACOMA (AP)—City officials clamped a city-wide curfew on Tacoma late Monday in the wake of a racial disturbance in which 35 Negroes were arrested and a dozen persons injured.

Police Chief Charles Zittell said the crew, from 9 p.m. to 5 a.m., will continue daily "until things calm down."

It covers a two-square-mile area, scene of rock-throwing and scattered looting overnight Sunday. Policeman Herman Knaack, 35, was in critical condition after he was hit in the side with a bullet during the disturbance. (See also Page 34.)

Overture to Russia?

Peking Seeks Border Talk

PEKING (AFP)—The Chinese government indicated Monday it seeks a peaceful solution to the Sino-Soviet border conflict by proposing discussions on problems of navigation on rivers forming frontiers between the two countries.

One of these rivers, the Ussuri, was the scene of armed clashes which provoked a grave crisis between the two countries in March.

A Chinese note to the Soviet government published by the New China agency said China is willing to send a delegation to Khabarovsk, in Soviet territory, in mid-June to discuss navigation problems.

POSITIVE ATTITUDE

The note said that the Chinese side has always sought to maintain normal navigation on these rivers. It expressed the hope that the "Soviet side will adopt a positive attitude, as it should," and that the necessary measures would be taken "in order to make a success of this meeting."

The Chinese note constituted an acceptance of a Soviet proposal of April 26 that the two

Progress Made On Link

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The talks between Canada and Communist China concerning diplomatic recognition may have made some progress in recent days, a diplomatic source indicated Monday.

The source said there had been a "positive development" in the consultations between Canada's ambassador to Sweden A. J. Andrew and Chinese charge d'affaires Liu Chi-tsai. The Canadian Embassy had no comment on the report, but sources close to the embassy said the consultations were continuing.

Major Speech Wednesday

From UPI-AP

WAHINGTON — President Nixon conferred for the first time Monday with his military commander in Vietnam and announced he would report to the nation Wednesday night on prospects of ending the war.

The president's meetings with Gen. Creighton Abrams and his decision to go on the air with a "major speech" were made before the Viet Cong initiated a new, intensive wave of mortar attacks in South Vietnam, presidential press secretary Ronald Ziegler said.

Officials said Nixon would not use his speech to announce a limited withdrawal of U.S. troops.

Abrams

He said such "indiscriminate and senseless killing and wounding of civilians in their homes and in the streets can only raise questions about the intentions of the other side." His was the first statement from any top Nixon administration official in which the good faith of Hanoi and the Viet Cong in the Paris negotiations was questioned.

SAIGON FIRST

Rogers' 17-day round-the-world trip will first take him to Saigon for four days of talks with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu, U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker and others. The meetings are intended to coordinate allied negotiating strategy at Paris and to analyze the Viet Cong's 10-point peace proposal which was unveiled Thursday in Paris.

Rogers told reporters he hopes to have "constructive meetings at Bangkok of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization and the seven nations with troops in South Vietnam."

"CAUTIOUS OPTIMISM'

He said he also hopes for a constructive session of the Central Treaty Organization meeting in Tehran.

Despite White House disavowal of any plans for a troop withdrawal soon, House Republican leader Gerald Ford told a building trades union conference that both public and private indications warrant "cautious optimism" toward the goal of peace.

"It does appear that we can have cautious optimism," Ford

Woman For President?

PARIS (AP)—A 40-year-old woman lawyer announced Monday she is a candidate for the French presidency, which will be decided in voting June 1 and possibly June 15.

Nelly Bonart-Pontay, mother of a 15-year-old daughter, said she does not expect to win but wants to run so "the nation's women become aware of their own strength." She charged French women are discriminated against socially and professionally.

Harvard Lampoons Bard

By Any Name Would Smell . . .

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — The Lion in Winter, which earned Katherine Hepburn her third Oscar, Monday received the Harvard Lampoon's award as the worst movie of the year.

The Lampoon, the oldest U.S. college humor magazine, gave its Natalie Wood Award for worst actress to Barbra Streisand for Funny Girl and thanked Miss Wood, Sandy Dennish and Patty Duke for not making any movies last year.

Sidney Poitier was named worst actor for For the Love of Ivy and the Ayn Rand Award for authors went to William Shakespeare for Romeo and Juliet, which the Lampoon found "a cliche-ridden work."

The Good Life Edited

'Family' Puts Bennett On Cutting-Room Floor

By IAN STREET

Premier Bennett said Monday there have been "some adjustments" made to the government's latest film The Good Life and, under questioning, admitted his role in the 27-minute color production has been cut drastically.

The film, given what the premier called "a trial run" in Kelowna and several other Interior centres last week, met with a storm of criticism from opponents who claimed it was thinly-disguised election propaganda.

Mr. Bennett stoutly maintained the film, made for the trade, commerce and industrial development department by a North Vancouver producer, was intended to encourage British Columbians to travel throughout their own province.

The critics noted many references in the film to 1952, the year that Social Credit came to power, but directed most of their criticism at seven separate appearances by Mr. Bennett in the film, underlining the message that 17 years of Socred administration has brought prosperity to the province.

Questionable Wine Spirited Away

ASCOLI PICENO, Italy (UPI)—Most of exhibit A, in one of Italy's biggest criminal cases is missing — about 2,760,000 gallons of wine. And whoever removed it from four sealed cellars replaced the wine with dyed water.

The disappearance was discovered during a regular weekend check of the cellar. The wine was ordered locked in the cellars last year as the key exhibit in the trial of 270 persons, including internationally-known winemaker Bruno Ferrari.

The government alleges much of the wine was adulterated with everything from banana skins to ammonia. Some of it, police said, didn't even contain grapes.

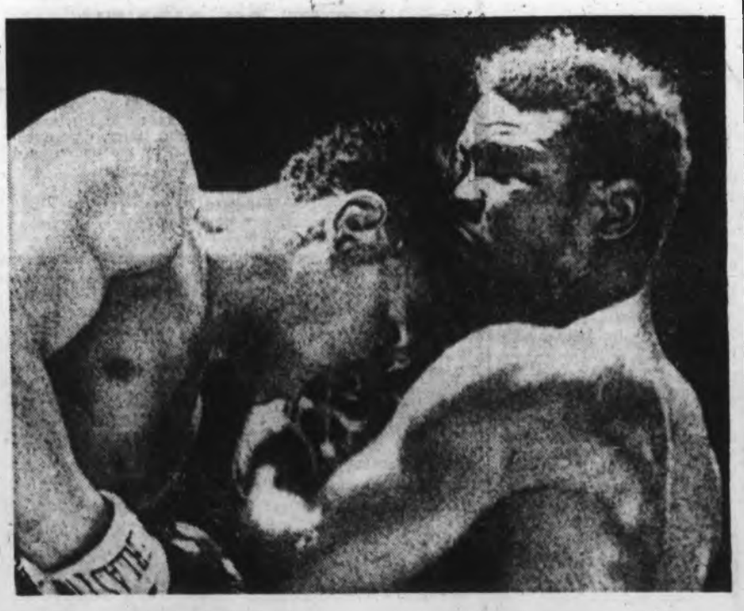

Authorities said they did not know when or how the wine was taken. But they estimated it must have needed 300 trips by tanker truck to spirit the stuff away. The amount of water replacing the wine, they said, could supply the nearby town of San Benedetto del Tronto (population 31,274) with water for 24 hours.

Market value of the wine was put at $640,000, but police were more worried about the effect on the trail, which already is considered one of the country's longest costliest and most complex.

Ferrari and several relatives and employees of his sizeable wine factories were charged last July with conspiracy, falsehood, commercial fraud and other crimes in the making of wine. Water was changed to wine in an operation taking about eight hours, the government alleged. Ferrari's daily profit at one plant was set at $3,232.

The trial was scheduled to resume May 26 after a recess, but authorities were not sure Monday whether it would reopen on schedule.

Ahearne, NHL Prove Targets In Sports Task Force Report

OTTAWA (UPI)—International ice hockey federation president Bunny Ahearne should go, according to the report of a three-man government task force on sport tabled in the House of Commons Monday.

Health minister John Munro described the glossy, 111-page report commissioned last August as "provocative" and "excellent" as he presented it to parliament. He promised the government's "very serious consideration."

THEY DID IT

The force was headed by businessman W. Harold Rea and included 1967 and 1968 world skiing cup winner Nancy Greene — now married to Canadian ski team coach Al Raine — and Dr. Paul W. Desruisseaux, a sport medicine specialist from Quebec City.

Ahearne was described as a "shrewd, garrulous and controversial gentleman," in the report. It was suggested he was not a good choice for the IIHF presidency because there was little hockey played in Britian.

MADE IT CLEAR

Ahearne was "an Irishman resident in London," the report noted, adding that "it is odd that so much leadership direction rests in a man who has no real base beneath him in his own country in terms of players and leagues."

Canada was losing international hockey tournaments because "the rules of eligibility" set by Ahearne and "the nature and application of the international playing rules works against her," the report charged.

It said European countries—"Particularly the Russians"—were not weakened by the skimming off of the very best players to play in professional leagues, as occures in Canada.

The report urged the government to press for an "open" competition in international tournaments and to insist on the removal of "artificial barriers" to the participation of Canada's professional hockey players.

Another controversial suggestion was that the government should legislate, "if necessary," against a section in the National Hockey League's standard player contract whereby the league president becomes the sole arbiter between the player and the owner on salaries.

The report called for a "clarification" of the current contract so that an owner could not fine a player for "indifferent play."

NO STUDENTS

The report also suggested the NHL should not be allowed to draft a player if he is seeking a recognized degree in university.

Another suggestion was that the NHL disaffiliate itself from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, especially in meeting the administrative costs of the amateur organization.

On wider issues, the report said too many Canadians looked down on sports, the government has failed to take an adequate role in the field and not enough money is being spent on its development.

Among the recommendations was one urging the federal government to undertake a publicity program to break down apathy and the "condecension" with which certain groups — including schools and universities — regard sports activities.

ON THE LINE

The federal government itself "must shed (its) diffidence about the involvement of government in sport and, instead, unhesitatingly and openly back it," the report said.

"Sport is too important, both objectively as a bringer of national benefits, and subjectively, in the minds of the Canadian people, to be smuggled into government politics as merely another phase of physical fitness — valuable though fitness programs are."

RECOMMENDATIONS

Among the major recommendations were these:

● A non-profit corporation, to be called "Sport Canada" should be established "to provide a focus for the administration support and growth of sport in Canada." It was suggested the government initiate a "study in depth"—including the organization of sport in other countries — before setting up the Canadian corporation.

● New definitions of "professional" and "amateur" should be devised for the purposes of federal legislation. The task force recommended that only an athlete who "persues sport as his prime source of livelihood" should be considered a professional.

● The organization of Canada's national hockey team should be revamped and the country should press for an "open" international competition in which Canada's top players — even professional players on leave — would be permitted to play. The report agreed with the federal government's creation last February of the organization "Hockey Canada" — to manage and finance the national hockey teams.

● Discussions should be initiated between the federal, provincial and municipal governments to make a greater use of existing sports facilities, including those on armed forces bases.

● Grants should be provided to employ professional coaches in a broad variety of sports and a national "pool" of coaches should be established.

Sweden Set to Pass Ban On Professional Boxing

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The government proposed a bill Monday to ban professional boxing in Sweden and predicted the measure would win approval.

Under the bill, amateur boxing would be allowed if certain safety measures were implemented to protect the fighters.

Minister of justice Herman Kling sent the proposed bill to the Law Council, where it will be checked before it goes to legislators for a decision later this year.

Kling said professional boxing should be outlawed as a health hazard and amateurs allowed to continue only under stiffer regulations.

Swedish amateur boxers have been using headguards in recent years. They would be forced to undergo stricter medical control and wait longer between fights.

Kling said the government might reconsider its decision to let amateur boxing continue if the new safety regulations were not followed or if the regulations did not "eliminate the health risks."

Gibson Takes Charge To Gain Fourth Win

Right-hander Bob Gibson, who led St. Louis Cardinals into the World Series last year, took over Monday night to get the National League champions at least temporarily righted.

He hit three singles, drove in two runs, stole a base, pitched a strong seven-hitter and tied a major league record in a 6-2 win over Los Angeles Dodgers.

Gibson, who also drew a base on balls, tied the record when he struck out the side on nine pitches in the seventh inning.

Rookie Al Oliver plated the winning run with a ninth-inning single after the Giants had issued an intentional base on balls to pinch-hitter Willie Stargell.

Only two games were played in the American League, and the one in Seattle produced enough action for a full schedule before Pilots managed their 8-4 decision over New York Yankees.

Most of it was packed into the first three innings, and featured a free-for-all touched off when New Yorker Bobby Murcer spilled shortstop Ray Oyler hard trying to stretch a third-inning single into a double.

Oyler and Murcer came up swinging, and were soon surrounded by all kinds of supporters as both benches emptied.

When peace was finally restored, the main-bout combatants were thrown out of the game along with Yankee manager Ralph Houk, who pushed umpire Russ Goetz during the course of a post-fight argument.

But it didn't end there. Yankee relief-pitcher Fred Talbot drew a warning in the bottom of the third inning after decking Seattle-pitcher Marty Pattin with a high pitch. And another donnybrook was barely averted in the fourth inning after Frank Fernandez barrelled into Seattle-catcher Gerry McNertney.

Court Action Instituted Against Off-Track Shops

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ascot Jockey Club and B.C. Turf and Country Club Monday started a B.C. Supreme Court action against William Wosk and R. T. Enterprises Ltd. in an attempt to prevent use of overnight racing entries in off-track betting shops.

The clubs, which operate Exhibition Park here, seek damages for alleged infringement of their copyright and an accounting of any profits that may have been produced by the alleged infringement.

William Wosk, a Chilliwack scrap dealer, set up four shops here and in New Westminster last week to take bets. He charges 50 cents a bet and claims his public messenger service is "not a bookmaker's outlet."

Beaman Wins Texas Open After Unexpected Chance

SAN ANTONIO (UPI)—Deane Beaman, getting into a sudden-death playoff when Jack McGowan missed an 18-inch putt on the 18th green, dropped a 20-foot putt on the first playoff hole Sunday to win the $100,000 Texan Open—his first PGA tour title.

Beaman, a former national amateur winner, tied the course record with a six-under-par 65 on the second of Sunday's two rounds, but still appeared to be a shot short of victory.

Jack McGowan, winless in four and one-half years on the tournament trail, needed only a par on the final hole to climax two fine final rounds with a victory. He put his approach shot on the 18th hole to the right of the green, but chipped to within 18 inches.

He made his par on the par-four 15th, the first hole in the sudden death affair, but Beaman calmly rammed his putt home to grab the $20,000 first prize.

They had finished the regulation 72 holes at 10-under-par 274, three strokes in front of Tommy Aaron, Dave Hill and late-charging Lee Trevino.

The field was forced to play two rounds Sunday because of a rainout of Thursday's opening round, and Beaman made the most of it.

West Bromwich Albion of the English League's first division defeated the B.C. All-Stars, 2-0, Sunday at Empire Stadium in Vancouver on penalty shots by Tony Brown.

Albion, which plays Victoria O'Keefes of the Pacific Coast League at Royal Athletic Park on Wednesday at 8 p.m., was in control throughout most of the match, giving goalkeeper Peter Greco from Columbus Carlings a strong test.

Both goals came in the first half when referee Frank Lee called Columbus' centre-half Gino Vazzoler twice for handling the ball to the annoyance of most of the 6,825 fans.

Contract Vote Friday

Second Bus Line to Strike?

By DON COLLINS

Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland face the threat of a second major bus strike, the Colonist was told Monday night.

It would sever the only remaining bus link between the mainland and Island. The Fraser Valley would also be hard hit.

The question of whether a strike will develop is up to the 160 drivers of Pacific Stage Lines in Vancouver, who will vote Friday night on a contract offer.

Bus service via B.C. Ferries was cut in half Thursday night when more than 100 Victoria-based Vancouver Island Coach Lines drivers went on strike for a new contract.

"This means half the ferries are travelling without buses unless they happen to be carrying charters," said Joseph Simpson, president of the CBRT and GW's Local 234.

The local covers 13 bargaining units in addition to the striking drivers.

He said the Vancouver drivers considered the routes normally handled by the striking Victoria drivers "hot" and would refuse to have anything to do with them.

Meanwhile, some commuters have found the trip between Victoria and Vancouver especially expensive since the strike began.

They have been using taxi service to catch ferries not served by Pacific Stage Lines. This has cost them approximately $7 at Vancouver and $5 at Victoria in addition to the ferry fare, they say.

Duncan Development

DUNCAN — The CPR's real estate firm Marathon plans a big development in Duncan within the next five years, Ald. Jim Saunders told city council Monday night.

He said "we don't quite know what it will be." He hinted a considerable sum of money would be involved and it would be a great asset to the city.

Ald. Saunders' remarks came after Ald. Dick Benzies noted that the city is the biggest landowner in Duncan and some of the city property should be made revenue-producing.

COMMERCIAL PROJECTS

Ald. Benzies suggested some of the land could be sold for commercial development. He expressed concern about lack of development and lack of progress. Ald. Saunders said, "Before we do anything we should contact Marathon first. They may plan to do the very thing Ald. Benzies is suggesting."

Ald. Martin Lukaitis charged, "Something always is held up by Marathon. Who owns the city, the people or the CPR?"

The mayor explained at one time city council tried in vain to make a deal with the CPR for additional parking and in regard to a third railroad crossing.

He said, "Now we have come closer." He referred to recent successful negotiations with Marathon regarding the third railroad crossing and the relocation of the main line which will allow the city to establish additional parking.

The city is facing the spring dog problem and council proposed drastic steps if a talk with SPCA officials is not satisfactory.

Ald. Rois Harder said the last time the city made a new contract with the SPCA the city "went to the limit and the SPCA said it would back the contract."

A total of nine 11-man racing canoes were entered in the event which ended the two-day, annual Corpus Christi sports that began Saturday with a parade and field sports.

A large crowd at Quamichan Lake earlier Sunday afternoon watched the three canoes shoot across the finish line in the same order during the Vancouver Island championships over about six miles.

Vote Split On Budget

PORT ALBERNI — Council Monday night passed a record $6,666,404 budget incorporating an overall tax increase of 3.4 mills.

Aldermen split on the vote approving the budget, and Mayor Fred Bishop cast a deciding vote in favor for a 4-3 margin.

Commission Request Rejected

Council Retains Control of Park

NANAIMO — A second request by the parks and recreation commission to have Exhibition park placed under its control was refused by city council Monday night.

Ald. MacKay said, "If we hadn't had Bowen Park dedicated we'd have buildings strewn all over the place.

"I see no reason why in future years we should leave ourselves open to having buildings all over," he said, referring to industrial expansion along the highway and railroad strip on the east section of Exhibition park.

"Parks are for people. They are the only place where we get pleasure out of our tax money," Ald. MacKay said.

Ald. Ken Medland said that by dedicating the park, council would be restricting its ability to use the land easily for the benefit of the people.

He said in Bowen Park recently, the lease of land to the curling club had to be put to the people because of the 20-year lease. Provincial regulations demand that leases of dedicated park property for longer than five years must be voted upon by ratepayers.

Ald. Hancock said the commission was concerned over the sale and lease of property in Exhibition park both in the past and for the future.

He said the city yard was in Exhibition park and the grounds were shrinking without recreational benefit.

In other business, the advisory planning commission recommendation that the Pay-N-Save Petroleum Ltd. re-zoning request be granted was suported by council.

He said popular opinion that there was a plethora of filling stations in Nanaimo was not accurate. He said many service stations were being closed, but people were not paying attention to that and were concentrating their attention on those that were being opened.

Swinging Citizens

Sunshine Club Lightens Days

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI — How to equate dollars with happiness is one of the problems mulled over by parks and recreation director, Dune Russell.

It's a question you're most apt to find him asking himself during the time when the Port Alberni Sunshine Club is meeting in Echo Centre. And the club has something going on almost every day of the week.

Although most of the members are what is known as senior citizens they really are swingin'.

The big cedar room at Echo Centre was divided by its full-side 10 or 12 tables of card rooms one day recently. On one sidt 10 or 12 tables of card players were engrossed in their games. On the other side, the Sunshine Club choir under direction of Mrs. Olive Boe was trying out old songs and new, accompanied by a string group referred to as The Ukelele Band, although several guitars and a violin were providing a friendly background as well.

In the Dogwood Room, there's carpet bowling on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, but as soon as the Tuesday crib tournament has been fought to the last peg, there'll be carpet bowling on Tuesdays too.

CREATIVE SIDE

Tuesdays, there are anywhere from seven to 10 budding artists at work. For all but one or two, it's their first attempt at putting brush to canvas but since last September, many attractive landscapes and still life compositions have been turned out by the members.

DAYLINER BETWEEN Courtenay and Victoria was croweded with passengers travelling Up-Island over the weekend as E & N service became only public ground link along east coast with Vancouver Island Coach lines strikebound. Indians Eye Town Status

Several Indian bands have shown renewed interest recently in a proposal to give them a self-contained municipal status, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Monday.

The minister said he has scheduled a meeting with the Cape Mudge Indian band on Quadra Island for June to discuss the question of a pilot municipal project.

But he added: "Interest is picking up everywhere and we have had inquiries from several other bands."

Mr. Campbell was commenting on results of meeting which he attended Sunday with federal Health Minister John Munro and six Indian leaders. Among those present were South Vancouver Tribal Federation head Chief Philip Paul.

Mr. Munro appeared to be persuaded that there is a need for holding of the biggest government conference on Indian afairs ever held in Canada, Mr. Campbell said. This is something B.C. has been seeking for some time.

He said: "I think every government department at both the federal and provincial levels that has anything to do with Indians should be included in such a conference. In British Columbia's case, that would include the department's of social welfare, health, education and labor.'

Cowichan Opponents Withdraw

Trustee Acclaimed to Vacancy

DUNCAN — Marina owner at Maple Bay, Kurt Horn, 38, was acclaimed as new Cowichan school board trustee when nominations for one seat on the board closed Friday.

Mr. Horn will complete the term of former trustee Alastair MacDonald who resigned earlier this year. The term ends in December.

Mr. Horn's two opponents David Roy Haywood, 27 of Quamichan Heights subdivision and Fred Zantvoort, 33, of Maple Bay, withdrew their nominations to run for a second vacancy on the board which occurred two weeks ago when Jack Efford resigned.

Mr. Haywood and Mr. Zantvoort are expected to submit their new nomination papers soon. The election will be held next month. Mr. Horn and a second trustee to be elected then will represent North Cowichan.

Term for the second seat will expire in December 1970. Mr. Haywood is employment supervisor at the Crofton pulp mill. Mr. Zantvoort is a stock broker.

Alberni Area Unhurt By Island Bus Strike

PORT ALBERNI — Despite the lack of rail passenger ervice into the Alberni valley, the strike of Vancouver Island bus drivers appears to be having little effect, except in isolated instances.

Patients who require special treatment at centres in Victoria, Vancouver or Nanaimo say they seldom use the bus for such trips.

"The bus is a last resort," said one woman patient who travels regularly to Victoria for treatment.

"Usually there is someone else going for treatment at the same time, and we try to combine in a car pool whenever possible, since taking a bus often involves an overnight stay which adds a hotel bill to the cost."

Hospital officials said they are not being inconvenienced. "Samples and specimens which must go out for analysis are simply being handled by other methods. We did not use the bus for this regularly anyway," it was explained.

While many loggers travel to and from the area's outlying camps at weekends, almost all do so by private car, so little hardship is being experienced in that area, IWA officials said.

Saanich Rejects Renews Apartment Study

Saanich council will go ahead with studies for a 90-unit senior citizens' apartment on municipal land adjacent to Hampton Park even though it rejected the first three proposals for the project.

"The project is not abandoned or in doubt," Mayor Hugh Curtis said Saturday. "It's just that on the first go-round we didn't meet with success."

Ald. Edith Gunning, chairman of the municipal housing committee, said "we are determined to go ahead to ensure that a suitable senior citizens' project will be developed."

Both the mayor and Ald. Gunning agreed the three proposals missed the mark.

Opened in mid-April they were: Allied Developments $518,057; Dawson Developments, $649,000 and G. H. Wheaton, $653,139. The first was for 84 units, the last two for 90, the number called for.

The lowest proposal would not have been an asset to the community, the mayor said.

"Does an urgent need excuse mediocrity? We said no, unanimously," he explained.

Ald. Gunning said the proposal was below the quality of other federal-provincial housing in the province.

"But we're not just throwing up our hands," she said. "The mayor and I will meet with the B.C. Housing Management Commission next week and we're going to do all we can to get a good development. It is most important that we build home-like units, not only for the tenants' sake but also for the neighbors'."

NEW DESIGN

Mayor Curtis said "we're going to aim at getting a new design and a better one, and getting it built as soon as possible.

The proposals were rejected in committee after last Monday's council meeting, but the decision was not made public until later in the week.

Mayor Curtis said the decison was made in committee because "in fairness the decision should go to the federal and provincial governments first. It was a matter of courtesy really." The release was delayed for the same reason, he said.

The capital cost of the low-rental project is to be met by federal and provincial governments.

The municipality's plan to buy single-family dwellings to rent to welfare families ran into difficulty when real estate values skyrocketed.

The scheme, called the Saanich Family Housing project, provided $700,000 to buy 50 houses at $14,000 a unit. According to federal regulations, the houses would have to be on sewers.

Inmates Have Time For It

Think-In Quiz Goes to Jail

By BILL STAVDAL

Canadian convicts will get a chance at an opportunity declined by UN Secretary-General Thant.

World Think-In questionnaires will be distributed in Canadian jails and penitentiaries by special permission of federal penitentiaries commissioner A. J. MacLeod, said Think-In creator Dr. Harold Foster on Saturday.

The Think-In, a global invitation for ideas on improving the world, is already bringing a swelling tide of mail to Dr. Foster, a University of Victoria geographer. Among the pile last week was one from the office of U Thant.

The secretary-general's secretary said he was "not in a position" to reply, but added: "He has asked me to extend to you his best wishes for the success of your project."

* * *

Dr. Foster hopes to computerize the results of an eight-point questionnaire now being distributed all over the English-speaking world — and in other countries soon. The Think-In will produce an idea bank for use in thousands of situations if it gets financial support to carry through, says Dr. Foster.

Of the news from the penitentiaries commissioner, Dr. Foster commented:

"The people who have the most time to think now have the chance to put their thoughts on paper."

Responses already are coming in from as far away as Belgium and Italy, but Dr. Foster has been impressed at the ideas coming from junior high school students in Greater Victoria.

"They are concerned with an amazing range of subjects: pollution control, conservation, nationalism," he said.

Many people have thanked him for the chance of putting forth their ideas.

Like everyone else in the world, Vancouver Island residents are invited to answer any or all of the World Think-In questions. Here they are:

What do you think the government should do to improve the world around you?

What improvements would you like to see made to any institution or organization?

What do you like and-or dislike about cities?

Do you know of any educational, business, industrial or agricultural process which has been applied successfully in your area? If so, what is it and where else could it be used?

* * *

Have you any suggestions to make people's spare time more interesting or more rewarding?

Have you any suggestions which might improve the use of the world's resources?

Have you an amusing story or quotation to share?

All Indian-Owned?

Chief Seeks Title Probe On Discovery

By NANCY BROWN

Songhees Chief John Albany is wondering if Capt. E. G. Beaumont owned the 160-acre tract on Discovery Island which he willed to the provincial government in 1967 for park use.

"All of Discovery Island was once part of our reserve land," he said Saturday, "and I've looked through all the band documents and I can't find any place where that was changed.

"Of course there may have been some sub-agreement with someone to allow him to live there and develop it, but that would only give him squatters' rights," said Chief Albany.

"I would like to know when and if this land officially passed out of Indian hands.

Capt. Beaumont, who was 91 when he died, willed the southern 150 acres of Discovery Island off Oak Bay to the government, which said at the time that it would become a marine park. Apart from Capt. Beaumont's home, there are also a bay, clubhouse, bunkhouse, and boat jetties in the area.

Chief Albany said he would like his band council to approve a thorough investigation and survey of the reserve lands on Discovery Island and Chatham Island.

He said a 1960 survey showed 90 acres of reserve land on Discovery Island Indian Reserve No. 3, while provincial figures showed 110 acres there.

LOST 120 ACRES

However, he said, a survey had also found 260 acres of island land on Chatham and Discovery owned by the Songhees while the provincial schedule of Indian lands showed only 140.

"Somewhere we have lost 120 acres," he said. "Maybe it was towed away, or swallowed in an earthquake, or maybe it was just taken over."

He said titles should be searched and the reserve lands on the islands thoroughly resurveyed.

"This is a prerequisite for the kind of development that should go on there," he said.

'SOME RETURN'

"We would like to get some return out of the land. Right now all we do is spend our time putting out fires and curbing vandalism on the islands."

Chief Albany said he would like to see part of the island land developed as a camping resort on an experimental basis.

He said such a development would be a boon to the boating public, and to tourists, and a money maker for the Indians.

"They could come in and camp and we would put someone there to look after the place," he said.

Brutal Attacker Robs 91-Year-Old

Wong Yee was attacked in his hotel room at 550 Johnson and robbed of $5. Despite his advanced age, he apparently escaped serious aftereffects, police said.

He told police through an interpreter that he was lying on his bed when a young man entered his room, grabbed him by the throat and demanded his money.

When he said he had none, the man punched him on the head, found a $5 bill in a dresser drawer and fled.

Eye Kept on Weatherman For Annual Loggers' Day

PORT ALBERNI — "All we need now is a little co-operation from the weatherman and the Elks' loggers sports day will be the biggest and best yet," said organizer Johnny MacDonald this week, as he supervised last minute details of the annual event.

The annual sports day, scheduled for Monday at Sproat Lake park already has some big names among the entrants in the log-burling, tree-climbing, tree falling and chopping contests.

"We have entries from Squamish, Mission, Lake Cowichan and Nanaimo, as well as the two famous Wickheim brothers from Sooke," Mr. MacDonald said.

★ ★ ★

"Then we'll also have strong competition in the log-burling with the entry from Art Williams of Nanaimo, and in the climbing from Ted Roberts of Port Alberni and dozens of other entries both locally and from other parts of B.C. It looks like one of the most competitive sports days yet."

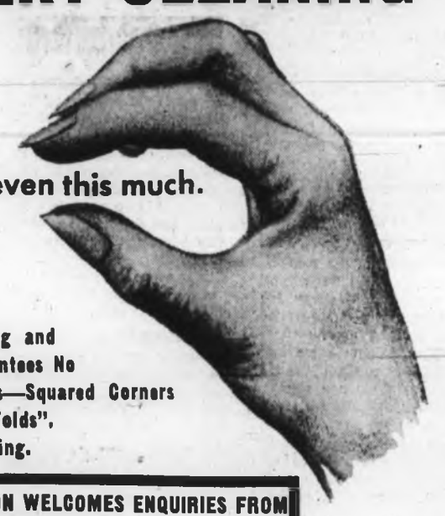

Mr. MacDonald said there is no entry fee to watch the events, at the park, which is being made available for the event through the courtesy of the minister of parks and recreation.

★ ★ ★

Concession booths will offer refreshments and games, while the Martin Mars bombers, now used as water bombers for forest fire control will put on a display during the afternoon.

Wandering Teacher Down-Under

Prawns Boost Funds

By HELEN MITCHELL

CAMPBELL RIVER — Barry Ross, 28-year-old globe-trotting school teacher, is now in Australia.

Barry, son of Mrs. Val Ross of Campbell River, left Canada almost two years ago to work his way around the world. For more than a year he has been sailing the South Seas on the yacht "Nexus," owned and skippered by an American, Chuck Harrison.

The pair left Whangerei, New Zealand, in November and sailed via Norfolk Island and Lord Howe Atoll to Brisbane, Australia, arriving safely on December 10.

From there, Barry travelled inland to Mount Isa in northern Queensland where he spent Christmas with Campbell River residents Bruce and Pat Baikie and their young son, who were visiting relatives down under.

In a letter home, dated January 10, 1969, Barry writes: ". . . spent Christmas in Mount Isa with Bruce and Pat Baikie.

"The town thrives upon rich deposits of copper, lead and silver. It is located about 800 miles north of Brisbane and 600 miles inland from the east coast of Australia. It's summer here now and the temperature, during the day, ranges between 100 and 112

Ross

"Bruce and I went on a tour of the mine, down to 3,500 feet below the surface. We put on protective overalls, heavy work boots, battery and head lamp, and hard hat. The mine has 120 miles of tunnel and 70 miles of railroad track. There is a working force of about 4,800 men.

★ ★ ★

"I'm back in Brisbane now, looking around for a job on the prawn-fishing boats that go to the Gulf of Carpenteria — funds are getting low so can't laze around much more . . ."

In March, Barry wrote: "Well, I'm now a member of the prawn-fishing fleet stationed at Mooloolaba, about 50 miles north of Brisbane. It's a small summer resort. The climate is warm all year around. In winter it goes down to 65 degrees at night and to 80 degrees in the day.

"We fish all night and sleep all day, use about 16 fathom nets. We don't fish in rough weather so at times are lucky if we get in four days a week. We just finished an eight-day rest period, fished five, and are off again.

"We worked in a fantastic thunder, lightning and rain storm one night. I've had quite a bout with electricity. I grabbed an electric ray that raised my hair straight up. Also, while watching one deadly poisonous sea snake I put my bare feet beside one on the deck. As if struck by lightning I leaped straight up again.

"The season lasts almost 12 months with very little slack periods of no prawns. Crew shares range from 10 per cent to 20 per cent, depending on skill. A new 45-foot boat set up to fish would cost approximately $24,000. If refrigeration was put on, it would be about $36,000. The restrictions are relatively few, just river entrances, spawning grounds, etc.

"The prices are good and, to my idea, the industry has a good future. The average crew share could be about $3,300, which is good money in Australia. Normal wages wouldn't be more than $2,400 a year. On a good boat you could double or triple this if you worked at it. Skippers got 25 per cent, some 30 per cent . . .

"I'm really taken with the northeast coast of Australia, which is the only part I've seen so far. The temperature is always warm, compared to home. Most people have never seen snow. The people are really great, especially in the smaller communities. Everyone lives a much more carefree life, less hustle-bustle.

"The outback has hundreds of interesting places where one could spend years touring but I think that I would prefer to live by the sea and only visit these areas.

"You just would not believe the heat and dust, and lack of water. There is no shade at all in places like Mount Isa . . . Rivers may rise four feet in a matter of hours and disappear with the same magical speed . . .

"Transportation in Australia is cheap, if you can put up with some discomforts. Hitchhiking is good if you are clean-cut and well dressed . . .

"All in all, I'm sold on Australia . . ."

Barry concludes this letter by saying he may return home for a visit this summer.

Ottawa Changing Welfare?

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA (Special)—Twice Monday, Health Minister John Munro was given the chance to dispel growing uncertainties about the future of family allowances. Twice, he declined.

Instead, he seemed to firm up a little more the possibility that the baby bonus, along with other welfare, will be based increasingly on actual need. He did, however, issue what amounted to a denial of a similar cutback in the old age pension.

Munro said the government wants to make its social welfare programs "more selective" to provide more for "the startling number of Canadians living below the poverty level."

He said it was his personal opinion that, "in certain of the high income groups, the universality of the baby bonus, the payment of family allowances, is questionable."

Munro

Munro made his remarks in reply to a direct question as to whether in this affluent age, the baby bonus was losing its high priority in the federal welfare program.

He disclosed the report of a task force, which deputy welfare minister J. W. Willard headed in a year-long study of the government's social security programs now was in front of the cabinet.

DIRECT QUESTION

When the Commons opened, NDP whip Stanley Knowles of Winnipeg put the direct question to Munro: "Does the government have any intention of introducing legislation to eliminate or cut back either family allowances or old age pensions?"

Here was the first opportunity to deny it, but Munro left the question hanging.

'NO DECISION'

"There is no government decision, one way or another," he replied, which could only mean the government was considering the future of the baby bonus.

This he confirmed minutes later, outside the Commons.

'UNDER REVIEW'

It was different, he conceded, in its contributory aspects as the "substructure" to the Canada Pension Plan.

But the baby bonus, he explained, had been "under review for a year" by the Willard task force, and was only one of a number of welfare programs being looked at, some "with a view to making some changes."

If the family allowances program was one of those where "some changes", might be made, Munro was asked, then was it possible the switch in it would be from the basis of payment to all families to only those actually in need?

'PREMATURE'

It would be "premature," he replied, to say what tests, need or any other measuring stick, might be applied.

The government, recalled the welfare minister, was "studying all social security programs" with the objective of "introducing more of the element of selectivity."

The future of the baby bonus came into question late last week when Prime Minister Trudeau forecast massive cutbacks in federal spending.

Asked directly if the family allowance program might be a candidate for the economy knife, the prime minister said only, "that would be telling" — then went on to remark that the $562,500,000 the program costs annually was "a very large chunk of money."

TRIAL BALLOON

Calgary North Conservative MP Eldon Woolliams accused him of flying "a trial balloon," then asked Munro if he didn't think reduction of family allowances might be political suicide?

Who could tell "these days," what constituted political suicide? parried Munro, and anyway there were "other useful pursuits than politics."

Tacoma Gets Curfew Until Races Calm

TACOMA (AP)—City officials clamped a city-wide curfew on Tacoma late Monday in the wake of a racial disturbance in which 35 Negroes were arrested and a dozen persons injured.

Police Chief Charles Zittell said the crew, from 9 p.m. to 5 a.m., will continue daily "until things calm down."

It covers a two-square-mile area, scene of rock-throwing and scattered looting overnight Sunday. Policeman Herman Knaack, 35, was in critical condition after he was hit in the side with a bullet during the disturbance. (See also Page 34.)

Overture to Russia?

Peking Seeks Border Talk

PEKING (AFP)—The Chinese government indicated Monday it seeks a peaceful solution to the Sino-Soviet border conflict by proposing discussions on problems of navigation on rivers forming frontiers between the two countries.

One of these rivers, the Ussuri, was the scene of armed clashes which provoked a grave crisis between the two countries in March.

A Chinese note to the Soviet government published by the New China agency said China is willing to send a delegation to Khabarovsk, in Soviet territory, in mid-June to discuss navigation problems.

POSITIVE ATTITUDE

The note said that the Chinese side has always sought to maintain normal navigation on these rivers. It expressed the hope that the "Soviet side will adopt a positive attitude, as it should," and that the necessary measures would be taken "in order to make a success of this meeting."

The Chinese note constituted an acceptance of a Soviet proposal of April 26 that the two

Progress Made On Link

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The talks between Canada and Communist China concerning diplomatic recognition may have made some progress in recent days, a diplomatic source indicated Monday.

The source said there had been a "positive development" in the consultations between Canada's ambassador to Sweden A. J. Andrew and Chinese charge d'affaires Liu Chi-tsai. The Canadian Embassy had no comment on the report, but sources close to the embassy said the consultations were continuing.

Major Speech Wednesday

From UPI-AP

WAHINGTON — President Nixon conferred for the first time Monday with his military commander in Vietnam and announced he would report to the nation Wednesday night on prospects of ending the war.

The president's meetings with Gen. Creighton Abrams and his decision to go on the air with a "major speech" were made before the Viet Cong initiated a new, intensive wave of mortar attacks in South Vietnam, presidential press secretary Ronald Ziegler said.

Officials said Nixon would not use his speech to announce a limited withdrawal of U.S. troops.

Abrams

He said such "indiscriminate and senseless killing and wounding of civilians in their homes and in the streets can only raise questions about the intentions of the other side." His was the first statement from any top Nixon administration official in which the good faith of Hanoi and the Viet Cong in the Paris negotiations was questioned.

SAIGON FIRST

Rogers' 17-day round-the-world trip will first take him to Saigon for four days of talks with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu, U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker and others. The meetings are intended to coordinate allied negotiating strategy at Paris and to analyze the Viet Cong's 10-point peace proposal which was unveiled Thursday in Paris.

Rogers told reporters he hopes to have "constructive meetings at Bangkok of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization and the seven nations with troops in South Vietnam."

"CAUTIOUS OPTIMISM'

He said he also hopes for a constructive session of the Central Treaty Organization meeting in Tehran.

Despite White House disavowal of any plans for a troop withdrawal soon, House Republican leader Gerald Ford told a building trades union conference that both public and private indications warrant "cautious optimism" toward the goal of peace.

"It does appear that we can have cautious optimism," Ford

Woman For President?

PARIS (AP)—A 40-year-old woman lawyer announced Monday she is a candidate for the French presidency, which will be decided in voting June 1 and possibly June 15.

Nelly Bonart-Pontay, mother of a 15-year-old daughter, said she does not expect to win but wants to run so "the nation's women become aware of their own strength." She charged French women are discriminated against socially and professionally.

The Lampoon, the oldest U.S. college humor magazine, gave its Natalie Wood Award for worst actress to Barbra Streisand for Funny Girl and thanked Miss Wood, Sandy Dennis and Patty Duke for not making any movies last year.

Sidney Poitier was named worst actor for For the Love of Ivy and the Ayn Rand Award for authors went to William Shakespeare for Romeo and Juliet, which the Lampoon found "a cliche-ridden work."

The Good Life Edited

'Family' Puts Bennett On Cutting-Room Floor

By IAN STREET

Premier Bennett said Monday there have been "some adjustments" made to the government's latest film The Good Life and, under questioning, admitted his role in the 27-minute color production has been cut drastically.

The film, given what the premier called "a trial run" in Kelowna and several other Interior centres last week, met with a storm of criticism from opponents who claimed it was thinly-disguised election propaganda.

Mr. Bennett stoutly maintained the film, made for the trade, commerce and industrial development department by a North Vancouver producer, was intended to encourage British Columbians to travel throughout their own province.

The critics noted many references in the film to 1952, the year that Social Credit came to power, but directed most of their criticism at seven separate appearances by Mr. Bennett in the film, underlining the message that 17 years of Socred administration has brought prosperity to the province.

Questionable Wine Spirited Away

ASCOLI PICENO, Italy (UPI)—Most of exhibit A in one of Italy's biggest criminal cases is missing — about 2,760,000 gallons of wine. And whoever removed it from four sealed cellars replaced the wine with dyed water.

The disappearance was discovered during a regular weekend check of the cellar. The wine was ordered locked in the cellars last year as the key exhibit in the trial of 270 persons, including internationally-known winemaker Bruno Ferrari.

The government alleges much of the wine was adulterated with everything from banana skins to ammonia. Some of it, police said, didn't even contain grapes.

Authorities said they did not know when or how the wine was taken. But they estimated it must have needed 300 trips by tanker truck to spirit the stuff away. The amount of water replacing the wine, they said, could supply the nearby town of San Benedetto del Tronto (population 31,274) with water for 24 hours.

Market value of the wine was put at $640,000, but police were more worried about the effect on the trial, which already is considered one of the country's longest, costliest and most complex.

Ferrari and several relatives and employees of his sizeable wine factories were charged last July with conspiracy, falsehood, commercial fraud and other crimes in the making of wine. Water was changed to wine in an operation taking about eight hours, the government alleged. Ferrari's daily profit at one plant was set at $3,232.

The trial was scheduled to resume May 26 after a recess, but authorities were not sure Monday whether it would reopen on schedule.

Housing Attack

NDP Picks Ex-Liberal

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

James Gorst, who less than a year ago was president of the Esquimalt Liberal party association won nomination Monday night to stand as the NDP candidate in the same riding at the next B.C. election.

The 45-year-old taxi operator won on the second ballot, 32-29, eliminating the Esquimalt NDP association president, Leonard Stephenson, and a teacher, Albert Canning.

Mr. Gorst quit as president of the Esquimalt Liberal Association last June, after his nomination for Esquimalt-Saanich candidacy in the June 25 federal election was disallowed by the Liberal party's B.C. headquarters. He had won the nomination by acclamation but it was ruled by the party his chairing the meeting was unconstitutional.

Mr. Gorst and the local Liberal executive quit their posts, but did not at the time quit the party. At the time he said: "True Liberals have been pushed aside by people who pose as Liberals."

Mr. Gorst told the nominating meeting he is free to campaign "full-time" for the NDP in the next election in B.C.

Questions Anticipated

Anticipating possible questions about his change of party, the former Liberal said Walter Gordon, former federal finance minister of the Pearson cabinet told him it would be the NDP party which eventually tackled the problem of economic domination of Canada.

"He told me that if he was 25 years younger he would join the NDP," Mr. Gorst said. "And since I was 25 years younger than him, I joined the New Democratic Party."

About 75 party members turned out for the nomination meeting. Guest speaker MLA David Barrett called the turnout "terrific," and said "we had to scratch for a candidate last time." Mr. Barrett, who was defeated by 36 votes in his attempt for the NDP provincial leadership a month ago, said the heavy turnout has "been duplicated all over the province . . . because they (NDP) know we're going to form the next government of B.C."

Mr. Barrett ridiculed a B.C. promotion film, The Good Life, as being full of "canned laughter and phoney scenery — something out of North Hollywood."

Commenting on reports that Premier Bennett had some of his personal appearances in the film cut out because of adverse publicity, Mr. Barrett said, "If he wants to win an academy award, he'd better cut out all of them."

High-Paying Positions

The MLA said the people who enjoy the "good life" in B.C. are mostly defeated Socred candidates who get high-paying civil service appointments.

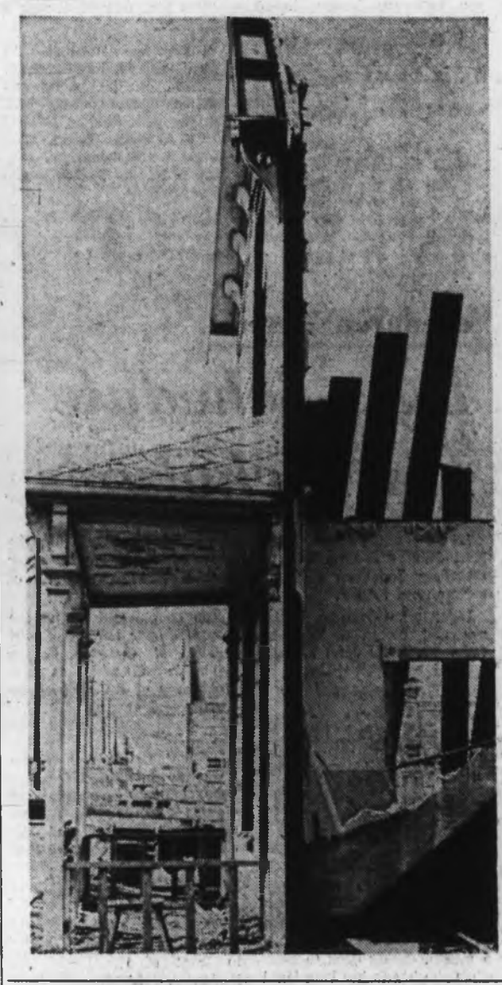

In his speech, Mr. Gorst said he had personally called on 100 out of 150 possible delegates.

Differing with his former Liberal chief, Prime Minister Trudeau, Mr. Gorst said a housing "crisis" does exist in Canada and blamed both provincial Socred government and the national Liberals. When interest on mortgages is more than 10 per cent and houses cost more than $25,000, "then I think we have a crisis in housing," Mr. Gorst said.

He also attacked the Socred government for the "farce that is being played out on hospitals" and the "fiasco of the Pat Bay highway."

The first vote ended with 30 votes for Mr. Canning, 16 for Mr. Stephenson and 26 for Mr. Gorst. On the second ballot, one woman announced her abstention and the vote was 32-29 for Mr. Gorst.

Mr. Gorst is a part owner of Blue Bird Cabs Ltd. The riding of Esquimalt is held by Social Crediter Herbert Bruch.

Lily Wilson Plans Retirement

Edgelow Eyeing Mayoralty

By PAT MURPHY

Former alderman Geoffrey Edgelow will probably run for mayor in December and senior alderman Lily Wilson will retire, according to statements they made Monday.

When Mrs. Wilson retires after 14 consecutive years of service, she and Mr. Edgelow will be deadlocked for length of tenure on the municipal body. Their record terms are equalled only by that of Edward Williams, who retired from council in 1949, also with 14 consecutive years.

Ald. Edgelow was defeated at the polls in the aldermanic election of Dec. 10, 1967. He was edged out by 31 votes by Ald. Clyde Savage.

Edgelow

Wilson

The defeat was the outstanding feature of the 1967 election and came as a surprise as Ald. Edgelow had a record of leading or being near the top in previous electoral battles.

Mr. Edgelow is the second candidate to enter the mayoralty lists for the 1970-71 term of office.

Early this month Ald. Robert Baird, who is due for re-election this year, said that he would be a candidate.

Mayor Hugh Stephen, who has always said he would be content with two terms of office, reaffirmed his position recently and said he would not run again at the completion of his present term.

In announcing his candidature, Ald. Baird, who was second from the top of the list at the polls in 1967, said a principal plank in his platform would be opposition to the CPR proposal for a city-built $2,400,000 convention centre adjacent to and tied in with the Empress Hotel.

Asked his opinion Monday on the convention centre issue, Mr. Edgelow said he was definitely in favor of a centre for the city, but felt that the CPR proposal was a matter for the ratepayers to decide when the matter was submitted in a referendum scheduled for June 28.

NO CONFIRMATION

There were rumors at City Hall that an effort was being made to postpone the referendum from June until the latter part of August, although no confirmation of the move could be obtained.

Mr. Edgelow took a strong stand on the matter of a sea disposal of Victoria's sewage.

He said he was content to abide by the opinion of some of the foremost North American experts, who maintained that the action of sea water, combined with the currents offshore from Clover Point, rendered sewage harmless.

ALTERNATIVE

"The alternative, it would seem, would be a sewage treatment plant at Clover Point, and this is an outrageous idea," Mr. Edgelow said.

"It would be a desecration of Beacon Hill Park and a waste of a large amount of money. All that is needed is an extension of the outfall at the point and this is included in the over-all sewage plan," the former alderman said.

Mr. Edgelow, who has been chairman of every city council committee over the years, said he had a few tag ends to clear up before definitely announcing himself as a candidate but he did not doubt he would be on the roster on election day.

ENJOYED YEARS

Ald. Wilson said she had enjoyed her 14 years on city council but the post was ever more demanding of time and energy.

She said she also felt that, when senior aldermen had a fair term of office, they should retire and make more room at the bottom for younger people.

Final Tax Rate

Central Saanich Up 2.74

Central Saanich taxpayers will pay a 2.74-mill tax increase this year despite three intensive budget-paring sessions by their municipal council.

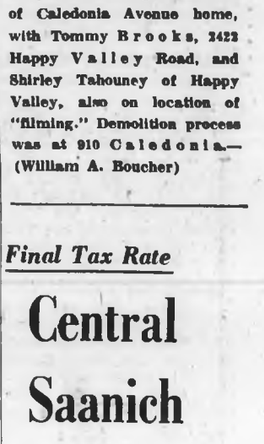

At a special meeting Monday afternoon, council struck a general mill rate of 19.75. Combined with 29.75 mills for schools, .48 mill for debt, and .21 mill for hospitals, it brings the total to 50.19 mills.

MILL COUNT

Central Saanich Mayor Archibald Galbraith said the mill in his municipality was currently worth about $11,000.

Last year's total mill rate was 47.45. This was made up of 16.91 for general purposes, .56 for debt, and 29.98 for schools.

The mayor said the municipality had budgeted more than $100,000 for public works this year, most of it to be spent on roads.

Adult Study Institute Transformation

District College Vote Likely in June

By BILL STAVDAL

Public support for a district college will likely be sought in a no-money plebiscite before the end of June, Greater Victoria school trustees and officials indicated Monday.

A plebiscite would be the first solid step toward transformation of the Institute of Adult Studies to two-year college status, a move tentatively planned for September, 1970.

Trustees, meeting as the school board's education committee, were told by district superintendent Joseph Chell that a brief to the department of education was "very well received." Department officials requested a seven-year enrolment projection which is being prepared, Mr. Chell added.

The Institute of Adult Studies is located on the Lansdowne campus of the former Victoria college. It offers high school matriculation, senior matriculation and special education.

It now enrols 401 students in Grade 12 courses plus 168 taking senior matriculation. Students have complained that the senior matriculation courses are unsuited to continuing education at university.

The district's brief to the department says:

"Students are seeking courses more in line with subsequent university work. It is evident to us that the presently prescribed Grade 13 courses do not fit this need."

DISTRICT COLLEGE

Students also have asked a second year of post-secondary studies, the brief notes.

The school district has been approached by the B.C. Institute of Technology and an unspecified school of nursing to offer "some of the preparatory academic work."

Trustees have opted for a district college which would be governed by the Greater Victoria school board, rather than a regional college which has numerous school boards plus government appointees running it.

No detailed cost estimates have been announced yet. However, as a district college the school would receive 60 per cent of capital and operating costs from the government, compared with only 50 per cent of operating costs under its present administration.

The plebiscite being considered by the board would amount to an expression of opinion by all eligible voters, including tenant-electors. Any referendum for funds would be put later to owner-electors only.

Army Hopes Buoyant After Early Returns

The Salvation Army's Red Shield campaign had by late Monday collected $20,133 of the $79,700 target set for this year's drive.

The Army said less than 5 per cent of the collection districts had been canvassed so far. Officials said that, judging by the rate the donations were being received, the fund was bound to go well over the top.

School Libraries:

Solution Creates Another Problem

Problem: not enough books in school libraries.

Solution: put more books in school libraries.

And THAT solution to that problem is apt to be costly, Greater Victoria curriculum supervisor Denis Brown told school trustees Monday.

Mr. Brown was reviewing progress in upgrading the district's school libraries, which have been substandard for years.

All 14 high schools have central libraries, said Mr. Brown. Of 39 elementary schools 10 have libraries and another nine will get libraries this year.

A further nine will be added next year, he said.

It is expected that "at least" 12 of the 14 high schools will come up to an average of 10 books per pupil this year, he added. (Ten books per pupil is a current rule of thumb for school libraries.)

But, said Mr. Brown, he's "very concerned" about library space. The district's current program to catch up has resulted in more books and more shelves being placed in libraries which are already inadequate in size, he said.

The answer is to either build new libraries, take over classroom space or decentralize school libraries, he suggested.

Contract Vote Friday

By DON COLLINS

Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland face the threat of a second major bus strike, the Colonist was told Monday night.

It would sever the only remaining bus link between the mainland and Island. The Fraser Valley would also be hard hit.

The question of whether a strike will develop is up to the 160 drivers of Pacific Stage Lines in Vancouver, who will vote Friday night on a contract offer.

Bus service via B.C. Ferries was cut in half Thursday night when more than 100 Victoria-based Vancouver Island Coach Lines drivers went on strike for a new contract.

The Vancouver line, which shared ferry bus service with Vancouver Island Coach Lines, has not atempted to pick up any of the business of its competitor.

"This means half the ferries are travelling without buses unless they happen to be carrying charters," said Joseph Simpson, president of the CBRT and GW's Local 234.

The local covers 13 bargaining units in addition to the striking drivers.

He said the Vancouver drivers considered the routes normally handled by the striking Victoria drivers "hot" and would refuse to have anything to do with them.

Meanwhile, some commuters have found the trip between Victoria and Vancouver especially expensive since the strike began.

They have been using taxi service to catch ferries not served by Pacific Stage Lines. This has cost them approximately $7 at Vancouver and $5 at Victoria in addition to the ferry fare, they say.

Two Injured In Accident

Two people are in good condition in St. Joseph's Hospital following an accident on Goldstream Road early Sunday.

Albert James Vanallstein, 23, of 497 Island Highway, and David Martin, 21, of North Vancouver, suffered leg injuries, cuts and bruises when their convertible struck a utility pole and turned over.

Police said the car was a total loss.

Happy Birthday Queen Victoria

Greater Victoria school board and the IODE will sponsor a joint celebration at 10:45 a.m. Friday in honor of the anniversary of Queen Victoria's birth 150 years ago. Lieutenant-Governor Nicholson will speak at the gathering at the Parliament Buildings.
